The Impatient French.
Technocracy Not Dead.
Bones in the Nest.
Our Age of Billions.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

HAVING HAD their revolution, their commune, their jacquerie, and many an outburst since the days of old Charlemagne, the French are not as docile as the mild Americans.

When the French government last week announced new, heavier taxes, the French did not say: "That's too bad," and look around for money to pay. They gathered in Paris in great crowds, prepared to march across the Seine to the Chamber of Deputies, and to the Elysee Palace, where the French president lives, and fought the police. The National Federation of Taxpayers in France has a membership of 700,000, which means something when the 700,000 are French.

The mild American pays when he is told to pay, and slips resignedly into bankruptcy when he can't pay any longer. NOT THE FRENCH.

EXPERTS AGREE to disagree, technocracy's Mohammed going off by himself with great dignity, telling lesser lights of Columbia University:

"You can't possibly bring our great industrial civilization to complete disaster without my help."

Technocracy is now called a vanishing theory, but it is not that. The idea that civilization must die because it is able to produce all that human beings need, with the help of machinery, is nonsense.

But it is still a fact that civilization is governed by selfishness, the biggest men thinking only about more profit for themselves, stupidly competing, multiplying production facilities without arranging for distribution.

NEWS FOR technocracy worriers.

Men for centuries have tried unsuccessfully to climb Mt. Everest, highest peak on earth. Many lives have been lost in the attempt.

Now pilots will take their airplanes, cameras, scientific observers over the great peak and surrounding mountains, and, let technocracy wail, within three hours from the time they start, they will have photographs that will enable them to map accurately every inch of the Mount Everest region, securing a perfect survey of mountain, glaciers, ravines, everything on the surface of the great mass.

What the fliers will do in three hours, going up thirty-five thousand feet, a thousand men, crawling, climbing, could not do in many years. That is technocracy, which geese call "the modern curse."

ON THE BORDER between Finland and Russia, a great pine tree brought down by lumbermen had in the top an eagle's nest containing the skeleton of a 2-year-old child that had been missing for two years. Shreds of clothing identified the child.

At first, we wonder that little eagles could be happy growing up in a nest with the bones of a helpless child around them. Then we remember that human children grow up very pleasantly with chicken bones and sheep bones on their plates, and are not shocked. It is all habit.

WE ARE, indeed, living in the age of BILLIONS. Once we venerated the word "million." A man who accumulated one poor little million was somebody. Not now.

The national income amounts to ninety billions in good times. Wages alone were sixty thousand million dollars a year. The gloomy side is the debt side. Leaving out odd hundreds of millions, you find the following debt figures as of 1929:

For mortgages and other debts: Farmers, TWELVE BILLIONS. Steam railroads, TWELVE BILLIONS. Public debts, national, state and local, THIRTY BILLIONS. Debts of corporations SEVENTY-FOUR BILLIONS. Individual debts, apart from farmers, TWENTY-FOUR BILLIONS. Total, ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-TWO BILLIONS.

THIS, AS the sage of Beverly Hills would say, is "one for the book."

Count Sforza, formerly Italian Prime Minister, says the world needs the guidance of the United States, and that is why we ought to be in the League of Nations.

Any power of "guidance" that this country might have it could use for itself.

Of 123,000,000 people, in the richest country of the world, with the worst depression ever seen, not one has suggested anything that could be called even a good imitation of an idea in the way of guidance.

ONE LITTLE farm item, sent by C. C. Ehrhart, of Versailles, O., read thus:

"In this tobacco section of the state of Ohio for one grade the farmers are getting three cents per pound, and on this same tobacco the government is collecting taxes to the extent of eighteen cents per pound. It is not hard to see what is the matter with the farmer, especially the farmers that are growing tobacco."

The important "matter with the farmer" is this: they work, in isolation, never build up any real organization and are always at the mercy of middlemen and conditions.

They could make their own terms, as the railroads do, but

HITLER GETS HELM IN GERMANY

Nazi Chief Triumphs In Struggle With Hindenburg

By EDWARD L. DEUSS
International News Service.

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—Adolf Hitler, Nazi chieftain who began life as a house painter and street sweeper, achieved his life's ambition today when he was appointed chancellor of the Reich.

The appointment was made by Germany's octogenarian President, Paul von Hindenburg, who at last bowed his shoulders to the sweep of the Nazi movement as a means of ending the nation's latest political impasse.

'NAZI GERMANY'

In a proclamation to the people, Hitler heralded his appointment as "the first step toward a Nazi Germany." He said:

"In this, our hour of triumph, we thank the aged Field Marshal, President Paul von Hindenburg, for placing power in our hands.

"The vanguard of the Nazi movement has succeeded in entering the government. This is the first step toward a Nazi Germany."

After standing firmly against the Nazis for months, and repeatedly spurning Hitler's demands for power, Von Hindenburg virtually launched his fatherland on an entirely new course, in what may prove to be one of the most decisive decisions in the nation's history.

Elevation of Hitler to the high post he now holds brought to its peak one of the most chequered political careers of any man in all Europe. It also temporarily at least ended one of the most titanic battles ever fought between two men for mastery of a great nation.

BATTLE FOR MASTERY

For years, it has been the aspiration of the Nazi leader, who began his political career shouting at crowds in beer halls, to be-

EATON APPEALS BAN ON PROBE

HARRISBURG, Jan. 30.—An appeal from the Dauphin County Court decision invalidating the $100,000 appropriation for the Senate Utilities Investigating Committee was filed in the State Supreme Court today. It is returnable May 22.

Oliver K. Eaton, of Pittsburgh; J. Julius Levy, of Scranton, and J. P. Ganey, of Bethlehem, counsel for the committee, entered the appeal.

The decision appealed was given in a taxpayer's suit brought by Ira Jewell Williams, of Philadelphia, counsel for James S. Benn, former member of the Public Service Commission.

The court held the appropriation invalid on the grounds it had been passed at a special session of the Legislature, the call for which did not include any mention of utilities investigation.

ROOSEVELT FOR DEBT 'TRADES'

Tariff Concessions Asked in Exchange For Revision

By GEORGE E. DURNO
International News Service.

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Jan. 30—The United States is determined to drive a bargain with Europe in exchange for revision of debts that definitely will help the American people out of their stress.

This was the burden of the message Ambassador Lindsay, of Great Britain, carried back to Washington today from President-elect Roosevelt for report to his home office. The Ambassador sails for London on Tuesday.

Sir Ronald was told, in carefully couched language, that Congress must pass on any scaling down of international debts, and that it would be futile to undertake a further funding agreement over England's $4,500,000,000 debt unless positive benefits were obtainable for this country.

TRADING POINTS

Tariff agreements and market concessions were understood to be the trading points Mr. Roosevelt brought up in his unparalleled Sunday conference with the British ambassador here at Warm Springs.

Further, it was reported the President-elect made clear to the ambassador his desire that England send a single representative to Washington after March 4 for debt negotiations rather than a mission.

If this report was correct, it would imply that Mr. Roosevelt wants Premier Ramsay MacDonald to make the post-inaugural journey. A precedent already has been established by the visits paid President Hoover by MacDonald and Pierre Laval, then French premier, on the same subject.

The "Little White House" officially was silent on Sir Ronald's flying trip here to get first-hand

The court's charge to the jury began after the noon recess and the panel was expected to begin deliberations late this afternoon.

THUGS USE 'NEEDLE' ON VICTIM

Woman, Near Death, Tells of Threats to Cut Off Finger

An Elizabeth woman was near death today from two hypodermic injections of two holdup men who attacked her near her home late last night.

Mrs. Irene Christy, of Center avenue extension, told a neighbor before she lapsed into a coma that her assailants had been frightened away as they prepared to cut off her finger to get her diamonds.

The holdup occurred last night near the Christy home. On her way to a neighbor's residence, Mrs. Christy was stopped by the four men. While one threatened her with a revolver, the others took an opal ring and a wrist watch.

Mrs. Christy fought and screamed as the men attempted to remove the diamond rings, which fitted tightly on her fingers. One of the robbers pushed back her sleeve and gave two injections from a needle.

The men fled to a waiting car. Mrs. Christy rushed into the home of Elmer Pierce, where she collapsed.

Before she collapsed in the Pierce home she told the story of the holdup. One of her assailants, according to her recital to Mrs. N. P. Irwin, a neighbor, suggested he cut off her finger with a set of instruments he had in the rear of his car.

Mrs. Christy was removed to her home, but physicians were unable to revive her. Nor were they able to learn the nature of the injections, Mrs. Irwin said.

WOMAN TO DIE IN CHAIR

SUNBURY, Pa., Jan. 30.—(INS.)—Sentence of death in Pennsylvania's electric chair, which in its history has taken only the life of one woman—Irene Schroeder—was passed today upon Mrs. Mary Stancavage, 49, who confessed she bulgeoned to death her 70-year-old husband, Jacob Stancavage, in their Shamokin home last November 16.

The woman swooned twice after hearing the pronouncement and could not be immediately removed from the Courthouse. At the county prison later her condition was reported serious.

Clement Kiselfski, 50-year-old stepson of Stancavage, likewise had pleaded guilty to the crime. He was sentenced to 10 to 20 years in the eastern penitentiary.

The Most Urgent Duty of Congress

A POWERFUL VOICE and a weighty endorsement have been added to the demand of the Hearst papers for a stoppage of importations from the depreciated-currency countries of Europe and Asia.

James A. Farrell, until recently president of the United States Steel Corporation, appearing before the House Ways and Means Committee to urge legislation raising the duties against countries with depreciated currencies, says:

"IT IS THE MOST IMPORTANT THING BEFORE CONGRESS. Not only our BUSINESS IN THE UNITED STATES, but our business throughout the world, is SERIOUSLY AFFECTED by the CHAOTIC state in which many world currencies flounder today, and so long as they do flounder it is the COURSE OF WISDOM for our country to take such cautionary measures as THIS TYPE OF LEGISLATION proposes.

"These countries are HAVING THE TIME OF THEIR LIVES in FLOODING THIS COUNTRY with goods on a depreciated currency basis.

"The WHOLE BUSINESS STRUCTURE IS INOCULATED in such a way as to be COMPLETELY DEMORALIZED."

WITH ALL THE EMPHASIS he could give his statements, he continued:

"I believe we are going to evaporate in some lines (of business) unless we act against depreciated currencies."

His testimony is so authoritative and so unqualified, we proceed with its quotation.

"NOTHING," said he, "is quite SO DESTRUCTIVE to sound efforts as the PRESENCE IN OUR AMERICAN MARKET of FOREIGN COMPETITIVE MERCHANDISE, priced at LEVELS SO LOW that AMERICAN COMPETITION is NOT POSSIBLE unless we bring down our WHOLE ECONOMIC STRUCTURE to the LOW STRATA of some of our chief COMPETITORS."

Mr. Farrell's testimony was supplemented by other witnesses from points as widely scattered as Massachusetts, Florida, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, the State of Washington, Maine, etc.

It was all to the same effect,—closed down factories, increasing unemployment, goods from countries with depreciated currencies sold in our midst at retail for less than the wholesale or production cost in the United States.

THE COMMITTEE was particularly impressed with the testimony of Mr. Farrell, not alone because of his vast business experience and his broad survey of both domestic and foreign trade, but be-

RESCUE GIRL TRAPPED ON 5TH FLOOR

3 Firemen, Policeman Hurt at Blaze in Produce District

One girl was carried down a ladder as 75 office workers in the Fruit Exchange Building were driven out by smoke from a fire in an adjoining building today in the Penn avenue produce district. Three firemen and a patrolman were injured and one man escaped by climbing over a canopy.

Earl Schultz, 18, of 6161 Taylor avenue, North Side, was proclaimed a hero in saving Miss Sarah Ginsburg, 25, of 5438 Avondale place, whom he found trapped on the fifth floor of the office building.

The fire started in a second floor storage room at 2027 Penn avenue, and sent dense clouds of smoke into the Fruit Exchange Building. The Cuda Building is a three-story brick addition to the exchange.

FLEE FROM OFFICES

When smoke began pouring into the Fruit Exchange building, office workers from the five floors began an exodus. Racing down the stairway, one of the girls notified the elevator operator, Earl Schultz. He took four down in his car and then learned a girl was trapped on the fifth floor.

As he started upward he was blinded and choked by smoke. Reaching the fifth floor he groped into an office and found Miss Ginsburg. Throwing a coat over

CRISIS IN FORD STRIKE NEAR

DETROIT, Jan. 30.—The "million-dollar-a-day strike" which has tied up the nation-wide activities of the Ford Motor Company, making 150,000 jobless, approached a crisis today.

About 6,000 men and women, nearly half the entire body of the strikers, milled in troubled masses around the two plants of the Briggs Manufacturing Company.

At noon the temper of the crowd about Highland Park Briggs plant was ugly. One worker, Arthur Noblet, of Ferndale, Mich., was seriously injured when a mob of 500 strikers attacked him as he attempted to enter the plant. State Police clubbed their way through the crowd and rescued him.

Earlier in the morning police arrested 10 pickets, including three women, for fomenting disturbances.

The Briggs concern furnishes auto bodies to the Ford plants. The strike cut Ford's lines of supply, forcing the shutdown which has been felt in nearly every quarter of the nation.

Astor Heir and Prince's Daughter Engaged

MILAN, Italy, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—The engagement of John Jacob Astor III and Donna Christiana Torlonia, the daughter of Prince Torlonia, of Rome, and Mrs. Elsie Moore Torlonia, of New York, has been revealed in a letter Admiral Camperio, retired, received from his daughter, Luisa Maria, at Annapolis, Md.

The daughter, telling of the engagement, said Christiana had asked her to be a bridesmaid. Admiral Camperio, whose wife, the former Eleanor Perry, daughter of the late Admiral Perry, now is in Annapolis with the daughter said the wedding probably would be held in the late spring.

The admiral, who recently returned on the Conte di Savoia, from a trip to America, said that Astor and Christiana met at Cortina D'Ampezzo, an Italian Alpine resort, last summer, fell immediately in love, and danced, hiked and played tennis together.

Astor is the posthumous child of the late Col. John Jacob Astor, who perished in the Titanic disaster on April 15, 1912, and the son of Mrs. William K. Dick, formerly Mrs. John Jacob Astor. He is 21 and heir to $3,000,000 left by his father.

Donna Christiana Torlonia is the daughter of Mrs. Elsie M. Torlonia, of 365 Park avenue, New York City.

REDHEAD -:- -:- By Samuel Merwin

CHAPTER I.

Charlie Janes dodged through the menacing lines of trucks and taxicabs and hurried into the North Station. There was just time to snatch up his evening paper and make his jostling way across the concourse to the Coventry train.

He was a personable young man, strongly enough built, springy of step (the daily grind of office work hadn't dulled him yet), with a distinctly reddish tinge in his hair and brows, blue eyes with rather more than the usual amount of pigment (which gave them a vivid quality) and freckles. On the present occasion, the reddish brows were drawn intensely together, and the pleasantly wide mouth was set. He saw nothing much of what was about him . . . the hurrying suburban crowd, the lights and the moving advertisements and the glint of marble—even the pretty girl standing by a brand-new suitcase who eyed him discreetly.

Because he felt that he must be alone, he dropped into the rear seat of the smoking car. Settled there—moody, self-absorbed—he opened up his newspaper, but whatever his eyes may have caught in the way of headlines failed to penetrate as far as his brain.

The trouble with him was Sue Hemingway. When he looked at the spacious, shiny, new North Station, he saw only Sue. When his eyes turned from the news-stand back to the hurrying, tired-looking evening crowd, they could distinguish only Sues. Any pretty girl standing discreetly by a suitcase was merely a Sue.

Charlie had one definite human quality. When he reached the boiling point, he boiled. Perhaps because he was red-headed.

Cheek on hand, he gazed out moodily at the familiar landscape; the backyards of a slum; a neatly kept public playground with a baseball diamond, backstop and stands; a brick-

G. O. P. CHIEFS FACE BITTER FIGHT ON PRIMARY REPEAL

CLAIM VOTES TO BALK DELAY

Harris May Force Test; Vare Bolt Anticipated

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Jan. 30.—Republican state organization leaders believe they have sufficient votes in the Senate to prevent any effort to send back to committee the primary repeal bill, if that effort should be made tonight.

They profess that strength, whatever the attitude of the Philadelphia Senators, among whom over the week-end there was much discussion of the potency of the big city organization in a primary as against the old convention system. Harry C. Davis, executive director of the Republican City Committee, consulted yesterday in Atlantic City with William S. Vare, and will transmit the instructions to the Senators who follow Vare's lead.

State organization chiefs, however, felt today that at least two of Philadelphia's eight Senators would vote to repeal the primary, even should Senator Joseph C. Trainer prevail upon Vare to give opposite instructions. With these two, the regulars believed they were safe.

FEAR HARRIS MOVE

However, they are far from positive of their strength should Senator Frank J. Harris, of Pittsburgh, tonight move to recommit the bill. Because of that uncertainty Senators were being buttonholed today as they reached Harrisburg, and quizzed by the state leaders as to their attitude.

One Senate regular, who refused to have his name used, today said:

"We believe we have the votes to pass the Prince-Chapman bill to repeal the primary, whatever the attitude of Philadelphia. However, we may not force a test if a motion to recommit is made tonight. If a hearing is asked we might be disposed to grant it, thus avoiding the appearance of running a steam roller simply because we have the necessary strength."

BACKED BY MARTIN

The move to repeal the primary act did not originate in the Vare camp. It came from political sources close to State Chairman Edward Martin, who is an advocate of the convention system. Among rural organization members there is strong sentiment for the convention.

Mrs. Marion Margery Scranton, Republican national committeewoman from Pennsylvania, is organizing sentiment among women for primary repeal. She has been angling for votes in both Senate and House for the Prince-Chapman bill.

Republican leaders were disconcerted at the action of Democratic legislators from Allegheny County whose caucus decision Saturday was to oppose primary repeal. This sentiment, reflected in statements by Joseph F. Guffey and Democratic County Chairman David L. Lawrence, was contrary to the predicted attitude of the bulk of the Democrats.

It is now assumed that only those Democrats who have subrora alliances with the Republicans will vote for the repealer.

HEARINGS SET ON BLUE LAWS

HARRISBURG, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Blue law modification, revision of the public school laws and repeal of the direct primary election come before the Legislature in the fifth week of its session.

Public hearings will be held tomorrow and Wednesday on the bills liberalizing the Sabbath laws of 1794 so as to permit Sunday sports and amusements.

Tonight the joint legislative committee will make its report on revision of the school laws. This committee will recommend, among other things, a state income tax for school purposes, abolition of five of the 14 state teachers' colleges, and reduction of the number of school districts from 2,587 to 500.

In addition the Legislature will launch its investigation of the cost of constructing low-cost macadam roads, and will take further action on continuing the Senate's utility investigation.

HITLER NAMED CHANCELLOR

come chancellor. And for the past year, in which his power has emerged virtually supreme, it has been the set purpose of President von Hindenburg to set him back.

Twice, before gaining success, Hitler nearly triumphed. Twice he held dramatic conferences with von Hindenburg in which he made his demands for "all or nothing" only to be gruffly rebuffed. Twice he lost. But on the third great attempt he won.

HITLER TAKES OATH

Shortly after noon, Hitler and the hand-picked cabinet which Von Hindenburg selected for him, assembled at the presidential palace in Unter den Linden to take the oath of office.

Nazi leaders were jubilant over the turn of events. The Hitlerites were hopeful that the 600,000 Nazi "storm troops" would immediately be transformed into an official militia as the nucleus of a new German army of defense.

Hitler and his chieftains were to be feted tonight at a victory banquet at the home of Prince August Wilhelm, youngest son of the Kaiser and affectionately known as "Auwi" in the ranks of Hitler's National Socialists, of which he is an ardent supporter.

The event was to have a double significance, since today is the Prince's forty-sixth birthday.

Political observers expressed belief that the first action of the new government would be to suppress and proscribe the Communist party, the most bitter enemy of the National Socialists, which would serve to dislodge some 100 Communist members from their Reichstag seats.

Such action would give Hitler a workable majority in the Reichstag, even without support of the Centrists and Bavarian Peoples' party. It was also believed that the press again would be gagged.

HITLER PLEDGE

It was reported that Hitler, in receiving the appointment, pledged he would rule the nation "according to accepted principles."

In addition to making Hitler chancellor, Von Hindenburg appointed an entire cabinet with whom the fiery Nazi leader must serve. Col. von Papen, in whom the president still places great trust, was named vice chancellor and dictator of Prussia. Baron von Neurath retained his portfolio as foreign minister.

Dr. Frick, trusted lieutenant of Hitler, was named minister of the interior, and Hermann Goering, another Nazi leader, minister of air and minister of the interior for Prussia.

Gen. Werner von Blomberg was appointed minister of war, and Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, chairman of the National Peoples' party, minister of economics and agriculture. Franz Seldte, commander of the Steel Helmets, was made minister of labor, and Count Schwerin-Krosigk, minister of finance.

Daladier Meets Obstacles Forming French Cabinet

PARIS, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Edouard Daladier, negotiating with the Socialist party for participation in the cabinet he is trying to form, obtained this evening an offer of co-operation, but attached were conditions which his friends doubted that he would accept.

He had expected difficulty with the Socialists. Their offer to participate in the cabinet was on condition that he accept a program calling for state ownership of the railroads, reduction in the military appropriation and certain other Socialist doctrines.

The veteran minister, who regained leadership of the Radical Socialist party after the downfall of Edouard Herriot, has already sounded out Joseph Paul-Boncour, whose government was overthrown Saturday; Camille Chautemps, Anatole de Monzie, another ministerial colleague, and other Left Bloc associates.

SENATE PUSHES 3.05 BEER BILL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(INS.)—The Senate bill to legalize beer with an alcoholic content of 3.05 by weight was favorably reported today by the Senate Finance Committee.

Since the Senate Judiciary Committee already has acted favorably upon the bill, it now takes its place upon the Senate calendar to await passage. The House previously passed a 3.2 per cent bill.

An effort to force consideration at the earliest possible moment was planned by Senate wets.

The finance committee voted in favor of the beer bill more than two to one, 12 Senators casting their votes in behalf of the favorable report and five in opposition. Senators voting for the beer bill included Reed (Rep.), of Pennsylvania.

Technically she pleaded guilty to the charge of drowning her daughter June in a bathtub in a hotel at Mattoon. The other two indictments, charging her with the deaths of her other two children, by agreement will remain on the court docket indefinitely.

CHINA ENLISTS SOVIET AID IN JAP CRISIS

Pan-Asiatic Entente Sought to Crowd Out Powers

By JOHN GOETTE
International News Service.

PEIPING, Jan. 30.—Virtually despairing of help from the League of Nations, strife torn China has turned to Soviet Russia for settlement of the Sino-Japanese Manchurian conflict, International News Service learned today.

High Chinese officials disclosed that a Pan-Asiatic League, from which western powers will be excluded, may soon be set up to end the Far Eastern impasse.

Attempts to break off hostilities over Manchuria and Jehol province by this means will be kept as secret as possible.

It was revealed that Chinese authorities now believe the impending league decision in the dispute will inevitably be unsatisfactory to the Chinese people.

AID DENIED

The masses of China, it was pointed out, have been led to expect assistance against Japan during the past 18 months, but in the view of Chinese officials this assistance will not be forthcoming in satisfactory form.

With this in mind, it was disclosed, China has been forced to prepare an alternative plan to combat Japanese aggression in Manchuria and North China.

Since Chinese public opinion, in the opinion of authorities, would never permit direct Sino-Japanese negotiations for settlement of the conflict, another means has been hunted out and found.

Chinese officials have cast about for a power unhampered by league covenants and treaties or other legal ties such as bind the United States and the nations of Europe.

TURN TO RUSSIA

The answer to their problem has been found in huge, Communistic Soviet Russia, which has its own vital interests in settlement of the Manchurian dispute.

Under the guise of negotiating a new Sino-Russian treaty, as well as setting outstanding Russo-Japanese problems, it was learned, Soviet authorities will act as go-betweens in the Sino-Japanese peace efforts.

According to Chinese officials, this step will create an entirely new situation in the Far East, placing the Orient under a Pan-Asiatic rule over which foreign nations and western powers will have no control.

The negotiations will probably get under way in earnest when Dr. W. W. Yen, now Chinese representative at Geneva, assumes his post as Chinese ambassador at Moscow at the termination of the present league session.

It was pointed out he then can initiate settlement of the Manchurian issue in the same dramatic and speedy way that he arranged for resumption of relations between China and Russia with Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet foreign commissar.

WITHDRAWAL STUDIED

TOKIO, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Foreign Minister Yasyua Uchida was authoritatively reported today to have sent notice to the League of Nations that Japan's decision on whether to withdraw from the league will depend on the character of the proposed league's report on the Manchurian issue.

LILLIAN ROTH WEDS JUDGE

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—With many well-known figures from Broadway and the political world in attendance, Lillian Roth, musical comedy singer, was married yesterday to Municipal Court Justice Benjamin Shalleck.

The ceremony was at the Savoy Plaza, with Rabbi Bernard Birstein officiating.

The bride, who has been featured in numerous shows, wore a gown of white lacquered satin, with white fox shoulder straps and a long train. She wore a wide-brimmed tulle hat and carried a white tulle muff covered with gardenias.

After a month's honeymoon in Florida, the couple expect to reside in New York.

It was Miss Roth's second marriage and, when she and Judge Shalleck applied for their license recently, there was a momentary delay while officials reassured themselves concerning the Mexican divorce she obtained from her first husband, William C. Scott, son of a Pittsburgh lumberman.

Miss Roth married Scott in Atlanta, Ga., in April, 1931, after the death of her fiance, Herbert Ochinsky.

BANKRUPTCY REFORM UP

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—With extraordinary speed the House today passed the Glass-Steagall bill extending for one year the expansion of the currency base it gives; voted continuance of the federal one cent gasoline tax, and then took up the new bankruptcy reform bill giving relief from the debt burden to both corporations and individuals.

It is one of the most far-reaching measures proposed this session and would enable both individuals and corporations to get relief from their debt burden.

Representative Rayburn, chairman of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, which handles most railroad legislation, said the provisions affecting the carriers were "drawn to meet what, in my judgment, is an emergency." He declared:

"I am informed that several important railroad companies and a number of smaller ones face inevitable receivership within the next few months. This bill provides for reorganization of railroad corporations in advance of receivership, with the consent of interested creditors."

Pinchots Plan Fete For Mrs. Roosevelt

HARRISBURG, Jan. 30.—(INS.)—Admittance to the reception to be given by Gov. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot on Wednesday evening for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be by card only. Invitations to the reception were mailed by the Governor's office.

The reception originally was scheduled for 8:30 o'clock, but because of Mrs. Roosevelt's late arrival in Harrisburg it has been postponed until 9 o'clock, according to plans today.

live without them. But, apparently, they do not know it.

IRISH FREE STATE elections give the victory to De Valera, half Irish, half Spanish, over Cosgrave, all Irish. In addition to getting rid of England, stopping payment for lands that Britain bought from landlords and turned over to Irish farmers, De Valera demands a united Ireland, north and south all one.

There he will encounter religious prejudices. It will not be easy to annex the "left-footers" of the north.

CABINET PLANS OF ROOSEVELT REVEALED

G. O. P. Insurgent May Get Interior Post; Woman Slated

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Here is the latest working model of the Roosevelt cabinet—subject to possible replacements—upon which the President-elect will center his attention in Warm Springs during the coming week:

Secretary of State—Cordell Hull, of Tennessee, 62, 22 years service in House and Senate, one time chairman of the Democratic National Committee; or Frank Lyon Polk, of New York, 62, Under-Secretary of State during the Wilson administration.

JOBLESS FIGHT STATE WAGES

INDIANA, Pa., Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Hundreds of unemployed marched unexpectedly in Indiana today to protest the state of pay on road construction by the state. Carrying banners asking "Help in the Name of Humanity," 100 arrived from Chambersville, were joined by 200 local men and paraded about the town while awaiting others from Black Lick, Dixonville and Clymer.

They obtained permission for a meeting in the courthouse and all available police were placed on guard.

Leaders said they wanted to confer with Judge J. N. Langham, who is in Pittsburgh today.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 30.—(INS.)—Ten men were arrested here today as 100 policemen and 40 special deputies battled to disperse more than 3,000 unemployed who gathered at the courthouse to protest against the county's basket poor relief system.

The officers broke up an incipient riot when they repulsed an attempt by 400 jobless men to rush the county jail to rescue those held.

Ellenbogen Fights Repeal of Primary

Declaring that any member of the State Legislature who favors the abolition of the primary is opposed to the rule of the people, Congressman-elect Henry Ellenbogen today announced that he would carry on a vigorous campaign against the movement among voters of Allegheny County through the medium of protest meetings early next month. He said:

"The abolition of the primary system in Pennsylvania would destroy the influence of the people in the selection of the candidates of the major parties. It would restore the convention system and its notorious evils of corruption and bribery."

Fire Ruins Paintings By Bank Director

The products of a hobby practiced over a 50-year period—some 700 paintings by Bank Director John A. Hermann, 70—were endangered today as fire broke out in the home of D. Dillman, 54 North Harrison avenue, Bellevue.

Twenty-five of the paintings were destroyed, with a damage, according to Bellevue Fire Chief J. E. Wills, of $1,000. Hermann, a director of the Dollar Savings Bank, had stored the paintings, which were uninsured, with his niece, Mrs. Flora Dillman, before going to Florida for the winter.

Harry Dohner, who also lives in the house, discovered the blaze as he returned from work at 4:40 a. m. Dohner awakened his wife, his daughter, Harriet, 4; Mrs. Dillman and Charles Kane, 18, a nephew of Mrs. Dohner.

Wills said the flames were confined generally to the space between the attic floor and the second-story ceiling.

The pictures were principally landscapes, done over a long period of years in Hermann's spare time.

Enters 'Robber Proof' Bank of England

LONDON, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—The Bank of England, hitherto considerer as impregnable as the Rock of Gibraltar and absolutely burglar-proof, was broken into some time after midnight on Saturday.

History of a sort was made in Police Court today when Timothy Phillips was arraigned on a charge of "breaking and entering the Bank of England with intent to commit a felony therein."

A detective testified that a watchman at the bank had found Phillips hiding in the basement. The man told police he had climbed through a back window. He was remanded for trial.

ENGINEER WHO FOUGHT TO AVERT JOHNSTOWN FLOOD DIES

JOHN G. PARKE FIRST TO WARN OF PERIL

Spread Word in Valley Of Conemaugh as Danger Loomed

John G. Parke, the engineer who battled against the elements to save the Conemaugh Valley from the devastating Johnstown flood, died last night in Monessen.

Against hopeless odds, the engineer and a little band of workmen did their best to strengthen the weakening dam while the pounding waters of spring freshets beat against it. As they saw their efforts fail and the dam crumble, bit by bit, under the pressure, they spread the warning down the valley that disaster was at hand.

Parke rode down the valley on a horse borrowed from a neighborhood doctor, the traditional story related, to spread the warning that the dam could not hold.

HUNDREDS PERISHED

A few hours later, the dam was swept away. On that May 31, 1889, hundreds of persons—exact figures never were obtained—died in one of the nation's greatest catastrophes.

Mr. Parke lived in Monessen for 25 years. For 27 years he was chief and consulting engineer of the Pittsburgh Steel Company. He seldom talked of his experiences in the disastrous flood. He was a civil engineer at the time, and was at the dam superintending improvements in the drainage system at the lake where the water was impounded.

Shortly after the disaster, he gave this account of it:

"For several days prior to the breaking of the dam, storm after storm swept over the mountains and flooded every creek and rivulet. The waters from these varied sources flowed into the lake, which finally was not able to stand the pressure forced upon it.

REALIZED PERIL

"Friday morning I realized the danger that was threatened, and although from that time until 3 o'clock every human effort was made to prevent a flood, they were of no avail.

"When I at last found that the dam was bound to go, I started out to tell the people, and by 12 o'clock everybody in the Conemaugh region should have known of their danger. Three hours later my gravest fears were realized.

"It is an erroneous idea, however, that the dam burst. It simply moved away. The water gradually ate into the embankment until there was nothing left but a frail bulwark of wood. This finally split asunder and sent the waters howling down the mountains."

This account is contained in The History of the Johnstown Flood, published in 1889 by the Edgewood Publishing Company and written by Willis Fletcher Johnson.

Mr. Parke came to Monessen from Philadelphia, where he was born. He was 67 years old. He had been ill for the past year, and his last active work was in connection with the laying of the Pittsburgh Steel Company spur of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad. He died at his home, 162 Schoonmaker avenue, Monessen.

He was a former district grand master of the Masons. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ella Parke, a sister, Miss Annette Parke, and a brother, L. H. Parke, head of the Philadelphia grocery firm bearing his name. Funeral services will be held at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, with the Donora Lodge of Masons in charge.

THE SCATTERED BITS OF THE TWO-STORY BRICK HOME AT 7810 BENNETT STREET.....A TERRIFIC EXPLOSION TODAY BLEW IT TO THE FOUR WINDS

BLAST WRECKS HOME, BELIEVE WOMAN SAFE

Search of Ruins for Body Fails; Flames Light District

Firemen dug through the ruins of a two-story brick house at 7818 Bennett street for more than four hours early today, seeking the body of an elderly woman believed to have been killed when a terrific explosion leveled the structure. They finally abandoned the search, convinced no body was in the ruins.

Police said the missing woman was the mother of Patsy Traficano, who with his wife and two children have been absent from the wrecked house since early last week.

She was believed to have been in the house alone.

BURST OF FLAME

The blast, shooting flames 15 feet above the roof of the building, was heard over a radius of more than a half mile, but did no damage to adjacent property. The porch roof was blown into the street.

Neighbors describing the explosion to the bomb and arson squad said they heard two distinct blasts. They attributed it to a racket feud and told of hearing automobiles stopping at the Traficano home all hours of night. Detectives found a truck bearing a 1932 New York license plate in Traficano's garage.

The damage was estimated at $10,000 by firemen.

ROUTED BY SMOKE

Occupants of a two-story house at 7816 Bennett street aroused by the explosion were forced from their homes by smoke. They were Henry Berg, his wife, Mary; a son, Frank; a daughter, Mrs. Stella Tilbrook; her two children, Billy, 11, and Lois, 4, and Mr. and Mrs. George Gunn. On the other side of the razed building was an unoccupied three-story building.

The flames illuminating the sky were visible for miles in the East End, attracting hundreds of residents to the scene. The cold weather handicapped firemen as they fought to prevent the spread of the flames.

SARA TEASDALE FOUND DEAD; NOTED POET

Sea 'Grave' for Woman Who Wrote of Death 'I Shall Not Care'

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—The death of Sarah Teasdale, lyric poet, was the result of an accident, Dr. Charles Norris, chief medical examiner, found today after an autopsy.

The body of the poet was found yesterday in a partially-filled bathtub in Miss Teasdale's apartment at 1 Fifth avenue.

Dr. Norris' finding, which was made tentative pending the result of a chemical analysis, was that death resulted from "general viscera condition and unresolved pneumonia" with "submersion, accidental," as the moving cause.

ANALYSIS ORDERED

The chemical analysis was ordered, Dr. Norris said, partly to determine the possible presence of too much of a sedative which the poet was known to have used.

Miss Teasdale's ashes will be scattered at sea by friends Wednesday.

Miss Teasdale was 48 and her thoughts in latter years had been growing more sombre. Her death shocked friends, who recalled her deft talent for achieving striking imagery without ornamental metaphor. Critics said her work had exquisite refinement.

Born in St. Louis, Miss Teasdale was formerly the wife of Ernest B. Filsinger, foreign trade expert and writer. They were married in St. Louis in 1914 and divorced in Reno in 1929. "Sonnets to Duse and Other Poems," published in 1907, was her first work to attract attention. "Helen of Troy and Other Poems," "Rivers to the Sea," "Love Songs" (which won the 1917 Pulitzer prize) "Flame and Shadow" and "Dark of the Moon" were among her other works.

POEM OF DEATH

One of the poems in "Love Songs" was: "I Shall Not Care." It reads:

"When I am dead and over me bright April
Shakes out her rain-drenched hair,
Though you should lean above me broken-hearted,
I shall not care.

I shall love peace, as leafy trees are peaceful
When rain bends down the bough;
And I shall be more silent and cold-hearted
Than you are now."

She had been working recently on a biography of Christina Rossetti.

LIBBY WILL SEE BABE EACH DAY

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—The condition of Mrs. Libby Holman Reynolds permitting her to move about as much as she desires, John N. Hatfield, superintendent of the Pennsylvania Hospital, said today she will see her son daily in the institution.

Mrs. Reynolds, widow of Smith Reynolds, an heir to the Reynolds tobacco fortune, saw the baby for the first time last Thursday, Hatfield has revealed, when she was assisted from her room to a nursery, where the infant has been kept in a modified incubator since birth, 20 days ago.

The child is gaining weight each day, the superintendent said, and the mother's condition permits her to have daily visitors for as long as she wishes. Hospital officials said they had not learned whether the boy has been named yet.

BROWN MURDER WITNESS DENIED

MT. HOLLY, N. J., Jan. 30.—(INS.)—Reports that police had uncovered an "eye-witness" to the slaying of Bradway Brown, 28, prominent socialite and young printing company executive, in his house in Cinnaminson Township last January 16, were denied today by Ellis H. Parker, chief of the Burlington County detectives.

With this statement, the case again struck an impasse, as police officials were working on widely divergent theories.

Parker is firm in his conviction that Brown was murdered by sneak thieves whom he surprised in his garage.

Chief Morris Beck, of the Palmyra police, believes the case has some connection with the slaying of Ruth M. Wilson and Horace Roberts, Jr., found shot to death in Miss Wilson's home three years ago. Brown, who was a suitor of Miss Wilson, was the state's chief witness before the Coroner's jury, which found Roberts killed the girl and then ended his life.

"The outrageous attempt against you and your family, freighted with such tragic consequences, evokes the indignation of the entire Italian nation. As I share in your grief, accept in this hour of trial, touching your tenderest affections, the expression of my cordial and sincere friendship."

South Philadelphia police admitted today they had made no progress in determining the identity of those responsible for the bombing.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—(INS.)—Detectives today were seeking several known bootlegger rivals of Harry Silver, Northwest Side liquor peddler, who was shot to death last night by a lone killer as he emerged from his office and liquor depot.

Silver was a known competitor of the aggressive Touhy gang, which, in the past six months, has been accredited with six murders in the determined fight to widen its scope.

Many Try to Bail Out Jailed Chow Puppies

Calls were still being received by South Side police today concerning a pair of chow puppies which were found by Patrolman Joseph Tatko Saturday morning. None of the callers admitted owning the dogs, but wanted to befriend them. Unless their owners are found today they will be turned over to the Animal Rescue League, police said.

Weather Conditions.

The high pressure that covers the central valley states Saturday morning moved very slowly. It was centered north of the Great Lakes yesterday morning and extended down over the Ohio Valley states to the Gulf, and this morning the center appears to be over Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, from where it spreads northward and southward. Another high is centered over Northern Saskatchewan and a ridge extends southward over the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains, while low pressure is centered over Manitoba and Southern Texas and British Columbia. The interior lows are causing cloudy weather over the country from north of the Great Lakes southward over the Ohio Valley states into the Gulf, with light rain over the Gulf states and as far north as the lower Ohio River and light snowfall over the upper Mississippi Valley. There was a slight rise in temperature over the Lake Region and southward to the Gulf since yesterday, while over the plains states the change was towards colder.

Society Bandits Bind Busch Heiress' Host

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—A plan to seize and rob wealthy guests as they arrived at a pre-wedding luncheon for Miss Lily Busch Magnus was abandoned by bandits yesterday after the gang took possession of the country home of George F. Tiffany, where the luncheon was to have been held.

The gunmen bound and gagged Tiffany and six others. They remained in the home nearly five hours and then abandoned their robbery plans about three hours before the guests were to begin arriving.

Two of the gunmen entered the Tiffany home first, and a short time later two automobiles bearing eight or 10 additional robbers, some armed with machine guns, entered the Tiffany garage, where a chauffeur was bound. Tiffany, who is president of the Bridlespur Hunt Club, was beaten unconscious by the first two robbers who entered his home. Loot taken from Tiffany, so far as could be learned, consisted only of a rifle and several shotguns. The luncheon was postponed.

Miss Magnus is the granddaughter of the late Adolphus Busch, founder of the Busch brewery interests. Her engagement to Arthur D. B. Preece was announced recently.

CATHOLIC BODY STUDIES BIRTH CONTROL

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Clergy and physicians of the Catholic faith attended a seminar on birth control yesterday under the auspices of the Cosmos and Damian Associates, organization of Catholic physicians.

The Rev. Joseph Reiner, S. J., former dean of Loyola University, here, told the group that spacing of children by natural means was agreeable to the ethics of the church.

He said poverty was one good reason why a young couple might not desire children and "the church imposes no law requiring them to do so." He said:

"Interference with natural laws and use of artificial means had brought the condemnation of church authorities."

He was convinced, he said, that the theory of periodic sterility was "effective and should be given a thorough trial."

SOUNDS WARNING

The theory was attributed to Dr. K. Ogino, of Niigata, Japan, and to Dr. Hermann Knaus, of Vienna, in a booklet compiled last November by Dr. Leo J. Latz, of the Loyola University School of Medicine. The Rev. Fr. Reinter wrote a foreword. It has been discussed optimistically in Catholic publications, and a similar volume published in New York carried the imprimatur of Cardinal Hayes.

Authorities on questions fundamental to the theory have varying opinions on its efficacy. Dr. Ogino and Dr. Knaus fixed the minimum life of male cells at two days and of the female cells at a few hours instead of the eight days and three days, respectively, accepted by most medical authorities.

The Rev. John Barrett, superintendent of hospitals for the archdiocese of Chicago, cautioned the group that the Catholic Church "has been a conservative organization for nearly 2,000 years, that she has been censured for slowness in approving of some discoveries," but that he could not recall any instance of approval having been retracted. He said:

"Let me recommend that we proceed slowly. The Chicago clergy is deeply interested, but there has been no official approval registered. We shall watch the development of this theory with close attention."

STUDIES THEORY

Dr. A. G. Miller, of Hobart, Ind., presented charts and statistics of 150 cases through which he studied the theory over two years. Eighty-seven women, he said, utilized the theory most of that time with complete success. The others computed time inaccurately.

Dr. Henry L. Schmitz, president of the American Gynecology Society and head of that department at Loyola University, said the method of computation was open to doubt but that it was well worth further study and experiment.

He said his figures showed that 9 per cent of all cases investigated were governed by 28-day cycles, 63 per cent by shorter cycles and 28 per cent by longer ones.

Dr. Miller replied that lately serums have been perfected for injection into the blood, "correcting this condition without a great deal of trouble, and that it should be done."

Dr. Latz said Ogino and Knaus arrived at the theory almost simultaneously several years ago. He said 7,000 copies of his booklet had been sold here.

Four township fire companies today battled their way through choking black smoke to extinguish a fire that swept through the tar products plant of the Neville company, Neville Island, and endangered the plant of the [illegible] Company. Harvey [illegible], president of the company, estimated the loss at $100,000.

The fire started in the pug mill where crushed stone and tar are mixed for roads. Flames crept along the conveyor to the tower, then swept around the building, a corrugated iron structure to retort and tar.

Billowy clouds of jet smoke enveloped the plant as engine companies from West Park and Fleming Park in Stowe Township and the Neville Island companies arrived.

the "general principles" of the Roosevelt debt formula. A handwritten joint statement tossed to reporters by the ambassador as he rushed for his train yesterday afternoon was the only public word about the momentous conference. It said:

"The British ambassador and Mr. Roosevelt have had a wholly informal and unofficial, but very satisfactory conversation concerning tentatively the arrangements for the coming meetings in Washington. It is hoped that it will be possible to start these meetings early in March."

Back of this communique, however, lies a great deal of delicate sparring between the United States and Great Britain.

LINDSAY IN CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, returned today from Warm Springs, Ga., and made arrangements to see Secretary Stimson before leaving for London tomorrow.

The Ambassador appeared in a very good humor and said his conference with President-elect Roosevelt had been "satisfactory."

FIRE ROUTS 75 FROM OFFICES

her head he started for the elevator but was driven back by smoke.

Firemen responding to three alarms arrived and lifted ladders to the fifth floor. Miss Ginsburg was taken down the ladder and Schultz followed.

Schultz's first passengers down in the elevator were Miss Irene Balsimo, of 1236 Iten street, North Side; C. A. Schiller, of 1841 Lucas street, and Catharine Meugebauer, of 1321 Woodland street.

George E. Morcroft, of 481 Dawson avenue, Bellevue, traffic adjuster, crawled from his office on the second floor on the Penn avenue frontage to a canopy and then to safety.

CROWD DRENCHED

The injured firemen are Roy Ravenstahl and Hoseman Osky, of Engine Company No. 2, and Arch Stewart, Engine Company No. 14, all cut on the hands. They, with Fred Swearingen, traffic patrolman, cut on the face, were treated by police and fire surgeons.

Fire Chief Richard L. Smith, estimated the damage at $15,000.

A hose became uncoupled from a water plug at Twenty-first street and Penn avenue and drenched a crowd. Later the plug broke and water spurted high in the air.

Elevator operator Schultz said:

"I slammed the door and started up. At the second floor smoke entered the elevator. I held my breath and shut my eyes. Luckily I stopped at the fifth floor. I searched the rooms and in the office of Sam Krasnow I heard some yelling and entering found Miss Ginsburg. I got a coat to protect her head, but we couldn't go down the elevator. Just then firemen raised a ladder and entered and took the girl down. I followed them."

By KENNETH A. NAGEL
Cipher Editor.

Here is a hard cipher contributed by Thomas E. Bambrey, of Everson, Pa. It is Cipher No. 50. Don't get discouraged if you don't succeed the first night. A tip will be given tomorrow. It should help a lot.

Did you solve Cipher No. 49? You found it tough, didn't you? It was hard until you found the values of "a," "b" and "c." It was easy after that.

For example, take the first line of the cipher, 2c-3a. Substituting the values you have 2x5-3x3, which is 10-9 or 1, which, in turn, takes you to "a," the first letter of the alphabet.

Continue in this manner to complete the message.

"When you pay a little more and buy a Rockne...
YOU GET A GREAT DEAL MORE AUTOMOBILE!"
MORE ROOMINESS! MORE COMFORT!
MORE LUXURY! MORE ADVANCEMENTS!
MORE STYLE! MORE EXTRA EQUIPMENT!
FINER PERFORMANCE!

THIS magnificent new 1933 Rockne unquestionably deserves your investigation . . . but it isn't bidding for your interest on the basis of being 'way down in price.

It's sold at a remarkably low figure—yet not so low as to necessitate skimping and cheapening.

Its rivals are the $1000 cars—not the cheap cars. It reaches into the field of higher priced cars for its specifications.

In interior equipment, furnishings and upholstery, for example, it so far surpasses anything that's customary, it spoils everybody who sees it for the purely price-appeal cars.

There's big car leg room and body room and head room in the Rockne. And, without question, it's the finest performer on the getaway and the straightaway, on the hills and on the turns, that ever bore so low a price tag.

That's why we urge you to look at the 1933 Rockne—and to drive it—before you're tempted to save a few dollars on some car that gives you much less.

You'll be interested in knowing that the first Rockne, the 1932 Rockne, had the biggest per cent of the total volume ever sold by a first year car. It sold sensationally because it delivered sensational satisfaction to every purchaser. Its most effective advertisement was the unqualified enthusiasm of its owners.

And the new 1933 Rockne is its superior in every respect. It's a low-priced car but not a "price" car. In materials, workmanship and particularly in character, it's a credit to its Studebaker sponsorship . . . and to the kind of people for whom Studebaker has been building quality vehicles for 81 successful years.

'BUY AMERICAN' DRIVE PUSHED BY GROUPS

Ross C. Purdy, general secretary of the American Ceramic Society, today announced that the United States Chamber of Commerce, informed him it is "leading the fight" for legislation to protect American industry from the inroads of cheap foreign merchandise.

This statement, according to Purdy, who is organizing the American ceramic industry in a "Buy American" program, came from Philip P Gott, of the chamber, after Purdy assailed the organization for its failure to "come out squarely for Americans to conserve their welfare by buying American wares." Purdy wrote the group:

"Your stand looks weak, and has every appearance of the chamber being under the control of those bankers and importers who are interested in seeing our markets flooded with wares from countries where labor is low priced and currency depreciated."

SERVICE CLUBS ACTIVE

While Purdy and the chamber engaged in the controversy, the North Side Chamber of Commerce was urging its members to "Buy American" and urge their friends to do likewise.

The United States Department of Commerce, in issuing the 1932 report on imports and exports in pig iron and steel, pointed out France had sent to American markets last year 32,526 tons of steel, 19,000 tons less than the preceding year.

It sent 130,630 tons of pig iron in 1932 to this country, however, while in 1931 it only sent 84,454 tons—showing a gain fo. French pig iron producers of 46,000 tons.

Pushing the campaign, as it becomes more obvious that "Buy American" is making orders for American manufacturers, and jobs for American workmen, the Nineteenth Ward Service Clubs have pasted posters throughout their district.

STORE LAUNCHES DRIVE

Declaring he would rather lose a sale than not be able to supply a customer with American-made goods, J. E. Kerkhan, display manager for the Mayflower Drug Company, opened today a "Buy American" sale at the Mayflower drug store in the Jenkins Arcade.

G. Hirsch, store manager, said the sale was to attract attention to the "Buy American" policy of his store. He said if the campaign was as successful as he was sure it would be, the patriotic policy would be extended to other Mayflower stores through the city.

Hirsch estimates about 90 per cent of the goods sold in his store are American made.

The Greek government, to cut down its imports of oils and gasolines, has ordered its automobiles with odd number licenses indoors one day, and those carrying even numbers the alternate day—government cars excepted.

Drastic curtailment of the American toy industry endangering 10,000 jobs, looms unless foreign made toys are forced to overcome high tariffs, Carl Dietze, Jr., said in New York.

Believe Prospector Murdered for Map

SILVER CITY, N. M., Jan 30.—(AP.)—Officers expressed belief today that W. W. Brooks, 65, prospector found dead in the Burro Mountains, had been killed for a treasure map he carried.

Brooks corresponded recently with Al O'Brien, cattle rancher, about a search for buried treasure, which he believed his map disclosed. He was found with his neck broken in the mountains three miles from O'Brien's ranch Saturday by Ernest Renner, a cowboy.

Prisoner Attempts To Chisel Way Out

OSSINING, N. Y., Jan 30.—(AP.)—An inmate of Sing Sing Prison was found yesterday trying to chisel a hole through his cell roof, apparently in the hope of escaping to the attic above and dropping to the ground after darkness.

He was Thomas Fennelly, 25, convicted of attempted burglary. His plan was discovered when he became so engrossed in his work that he forgot to report for check-up.

Sir William Taylor, Noted Surgeon, Dies

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Sir William Taylor, 62, president of the Royal Academy of Medicine in Ireland since 1927, died suddenly today.

He was noted as a surgeon, an honorable fellow of the American College of Surgeons and past president of the Association of Surgeons of Great Britain and Ireland.

cause of his well-known loyalty to the interests of the American workingman.

His consistent stand against unnecessary and irresponsible wage reduction, while in the active direction of the great corporation of which he was so long president, gave particular weight to his plea for the PROTECTION OF THE WORKER AGAINST FORCED UNEMPLOYMENT.

His words should completely silence what little opposition remains to the patriotic Buy American movement, and to the demand going up from all parts of the United States for Congressional support for it in the form of emergency legislation.

The country learns with indignation from the Washington dispatches that many Democrats are ignoring the bill introduced by Representative Hill (Democrat), from the State of Washington, for immediate tariff protection against low-currency imports.

There is said to be a Democratic desire that the question "be kept open for the new administration."

THE QUESTION SHOULD NOT BE KEPT OPEN AN UNNECESSARY MOMENT.

The emergency is upon us and grows worse with each day's delay by Congress.

If Democrats are so fatuous and short-sighted as to play politics with this great duty of national preservation, IT WILL GO ILL WITH THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY, both in this administration and the administration shortly to be inaugurated.

THE WORKINGMAN'S JOB AND THE RESTORATION OF AMERICAN INDUSTRY ARE NOT PLAYTHINGS FOR CHEAP POLITICIANS!

MATS KEEP COX HUTS WARM

Some two or three weeks ago Father Cox figured it out that the "mats" used by the Sun-Telegraph in making stereotypes from the type forms and then discarded could be utilized as interior lining and inner roofing for the shacks at Shantytown and Coxtown.

At his request the Sun-Telegraph sent him a supply of these "mats" for experimental purposes. As a result every one of the rude huts in Shantytown is now solidly lined with "mats," they have been placed under the roofs as an added protection from cold and wind and many of the residents of this unique community are using them as a floor covering. Father Cox says that the experiment is a gratifying success and he sent for another load yesterday to be used for the same purpose at "Coxtown," his farming community out on Kittanning pike.

These "mats" are the full size of a newspaper page. They consist of a combination of wood pulp and clay and form a hard board 1/8 of an inch in thickness. The impression on each "mat" shows a full page of the Sun-Telegraph.

The subscription drive inaugurated by the Sun-Telegraph for Father Cox is meeting with gratifying success. Every subscription for this newspaper that comes in on the blank on this page brings a liberal cash commission to the Father Cox Unemployment Relief Fund.

Chimes Sound Alarm When Church Burns

HOT SPRINGS, Va., Jan 30.—(AP.)—Fire heavily damaged St. Luke's Episcopal Church yesterday and also damaged a number of religious pictures in the apse which were being painted by Mrs. William Sergeant Kendall, well-known artist. A short circuit caused by the flames rang the chimes and led to the discovery of the fire.

Divorces Husband, But Asks for Dogs

SEATTLE, Jan. 30. — (AP.) — Mrs. Lucretia Sheldon did not want her husband, William F., a cook, any longer, she told Superior Judge Robert M. Jones in seeking a divorce, but she did want her 25 Pekinese and Boston terrier dogs. Judge Jones signed an order giving Mrs. Sheldon the dogs, $12.50 a month for six months, and a divorce.

Pay Cut Discussed By Pennsy Group

The question of extending further the organization's agreement to a 10 per cent reduction in wages was discussed at a meeting of 200 members of the Pennsylvania System Fraternity, composed of maintenance of way workers of the Pennsylvania Railroad, yesterday. Edward Richards, chairman, presided.

CHINESE BEATS DEPORTATION

Yee See Que, 28, won his long fight against deportation today in an opinion rendered by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson.

The opinion followed Que's habeas corpus proceedings against W. H. Marshall, director of immigration in the Pittsburgh district.

Que, who entered the country in 1904 as the minor son of a Chinese merchant, was ordered deported by the Department of Labor last April on the grounds that he had changed his occupation from merchant to laborer.

The opinion ruled any alien lawfully admitted to the United States without any definite limitations of his residence is entitled to remain as long as he desires in the absence of conviction of a crime.

After working as a bookkeeper for a Third avenue merchant, Que went to work in a laundry.

FUGITIVE FACES ST. LOUIS TERM

CANON CITY, Col., Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Glenn Smeeman, 33, Cleveland (O.) music publisher, whose three-year-and-one-month sentence for automobile theft was commuted by Gov. Edwin C. Johnson to six months, will be released from the state prison today to Sheriff D. P. Van Buskirk, who will hold him for St. Louis authorities.

Smeeman will be held in the Fremont County Jail, Warden Roy Best said, until the arrival of a deputy from St. Louis, where Smeeman faces a two-year sentence for automobile theft.

The warden said he had received a telegram from Sheriff Thomas R. Madden at St. Louis stating he was sending a deputy immediately to return Smeeman to the Missouri city.

2nd Arson Warrant For Lakes Skipper

DETROIT, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—A second warrant against Capt. William Nicholson, veteran Great Lakes skipper, charging him with conspiracy to commit arson in connection with the burning of two of his steamers last June, was issued today, an hour after he first had been dismissed in Common Pleas Court.

The second warrant was issued at the request of the prosecutor's office. Judge James M. Jeffries, in dismissing the first charge, had said he found no probable cause to hold the captain for trial.

Globe-Trotting

With the Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Alderman Charles E. Gibson, of the Twenty-first Ward, doesn't make his civil marriages a cut and dried affair. He has won the admiration of the couples he joins together by his dignified performance of the marriage ceremony . . . and never fails to add the sentimental touch by presenting the bride with a bouquet.

We have had many globe-trotters tell us about robins, cardinals, woodpeckers and sparrows but it remained for little Susanna and her sister, Rita Pugh, Mt. Mercy girls, to mention owls. Not only did they mention them, but on Saturday gave us a baby horned owl which is the snappiest bird I ever saw.

* * *

Summing everything up, we might say that our "mentioned menagerie" is gaining alarming proportions. To wit, to date: Six acres of robins; four hollows of cardinals; five telegraph poles of woodpeckers; one misdirected carrier pigeon; one lonesome mule; one globe croaking bullfrog; 16 pages of missing dogs; one "forgotten blacksnake, and now, so 'elp us, a genuine horned owl. What next?—What next?

* * *

Miss Hupe: Pittsburgh is a second-class city, Philadelphia is the state's only first-class city, having a million or more inhabitants.

Mrs. J. J. Kinney: Never attended school in Braddock. It must have been a mischievous namesake.

Miss Eva J. J., of Monaca, crashes through with "Buy American" and we won't sing "Brother Can You Spare a Dime."

In early Pittsburgh's first fashionable dancing academy, Monsieur De Long, the professor, permitted charge accounts for the women and misses, but if the men wanted to learn Europe's latest steps it was pay in advance. L. T. Stevenson wants to know why?

More delegates to the Globe Trotters "nonny—genarian" convention. Mt. Lebanon is represented by Mrs. Lydia A. Stuyvesant; and "Uncle John" Horrocks is a delegate—at large from Millvale and Wilmerding.

Fred Conrad reports competition in Boston, Pa.—one Leo Kittle who globe hops from door to door for news. But Leo neglected this scoop about Fred's Grandpa who is 88 and the only remaining member of his company of Civil War veterans.

2,000 TRAPPED IN CALIFORNIA BLIZZARD

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Caught in a sudden and terrific blizzard, more than 2,000 persons were snowbound in the San Bernardino Mountains of Southern California today as winter stormed the Pacific Coast for the seventeenth consecutive day.

In the lowlands of Long Beach, Cal., 50 families waited for flood waters to leave the homes from which they were rescued by life boats yesterday. Nearby Los Angeles expected more rain after experiencing the greatest precipitation in 17 years—8.41 inches since January 1.

Every available snowplow in Southern California was turned to the rescue of the hundreds marooned in the San Bernardino Mountains after they watched the Lake Arrowhead winter sports carnival yesterday. A food shortage was feared.

NEW ENGLAND FIGHTS SEA

BOSTON, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Municipal and state authorities prepared today to bolster battered sea walls along the New England coast as one of the worst storms in the history of the section abated.

The barriers that ordinarily hold back the rush of the tide were so weakened in some places it was feared only little more hammering by the sea would destroy them.

Dredge Burns, Sinks As Crowds Watch

The Pittsburgh Gravel Company's dredgeboat, the Flora, burned and sank in the Monongahela River at South Eighth street, early yesterday. Firemen poured streams of water on it ineffectively, they reported.

The boat went down with an estimated loss of $12,000 as scores of motorists watched from the Boulevard of the Allies.

Expert to Explain Personal Tax Law

W. E. Bair, tax expert, will explain the personal property tax law at a meeting of the Oakmont Chamber of Commerce in the Oakmont Presbyterian Church Thursday night. Other speakers will be Dr. Marion McKay, of the University of Pittsburgh, and Jesse Green, president of the Chamber, who will preside.

'Y' Group to Hear Music Instructress

Florence Shute, music director of Peabody High School, will speak at a meeting of the Discussion Group in East Liberty Young Women's Christian Association following a dinner at 6:30 o'clock tonight. The group is composed of members of the East Liberty Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., and meetings are held alternately in the two association buildings.

'Siamese Eggs' Laid By Chicken in Ohio

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Jan. 30.—(AP.)—What Alfred H. Davies calls Siamese eggs were laid yesterday by his pet hen. The twin eggs are similar in size and shape and are connected by a cord coming from inside the shells.

Democratic Women Pay Honor to Mrs. Garner

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A place where laughter is gay and light, where cookies are crisp, and tea has a special savor is the Woman's National Democratic Club where the leading feminine spirits of a victorious party gather on a Saturday afternoon.

There the visitor to Washington will see Nellie Tayloe Ross, former Governor and able vice chairman; the ever-energetic Ruth Bryan Owen; the aristocratic Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, and a dozen others being talked these days as possibilities for important posts in the next administration.

Two weeks ago, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson was the honor guest, smiling her joy at the turn of the political wheel which brings her husband's party once more to the front; and which has put his personal physician, Cary T. Grayson, at the head of the oncoming inaugural festivities.

Saturday the reception revolved around Mrs. John N. Garner, wife of the Speaker of the House and Vice President-elect. Few women worked harder in the campaign that led to victory than Mrs. Garner. But few were more secluded from the public eye. Her task was handling the tremendous mail which came to her husband, a labor she has continued since. Not many woman Democrats have had opportunity to meet her socially—in fact, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President-elect, has not yet met Mrs. Garner, wife of the Vice President-elect.

ACCESSORIES COORDINATE COATS AND FROCKS IN NEW SHOWINGS

THE NEW models for 1933 follow the general plan for fashionable colors. Coats and dresses, contrary to previous styles, do not match, either in color, in line or in fabric. There is nothing of the ensemble in the majority of the models.

THERE IS, however, a coordination between coats and frocks worn together. Mannequins who show both coats and dresses also wear the accessories that fit into the color scheme of both garments. Gloves, shoes, bags and hats are in harmony, so that whether worn with either coat or dress they will be harmonious.

* * *

THE DRESS and coat in today's sketch are modeled together—the coat in black, the dress in a mottled tweed that combines black and white and that gives the effect of gray. A velvet beret, in black, velvet gauntlet gloves and a gray bag complete the outfit.

BOTH COAT and dress follow the fitted silhouette and are belted in at the waistline. Both are the calf-length that is correct for street wear. The coat, however, gives much interest to the sleeves, with their seal trimmings, while the sleeves of the dress are simple and straight. Note the way the coat sleeves end with fabric, rather than with fur.

* * *

THE DRESS is severely tailored and is finished with black buttons and black belt. The guimpe vestee, of white moire, has a twisted and rolled collar.

Powder... cleans teeth as nothing else can

OUTLASTS TOOTHPASTE 2 to 1

Doubly Efficient At Only Half The Cost

THERE is nothing known that will clean and polish teeth so quickly and leave them so gleaming white—as POWDER.

That is why your dentist, when cleaning your teeth, as you know—always uses powder.

As it is only the powder part of any dentifrice that cleans, a dentifrice that is ALL POWDER just naturally cleans best.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder is ALL POWDER—100% cleansing properties. This is more than twice the cleansing properties of tooth pastes.

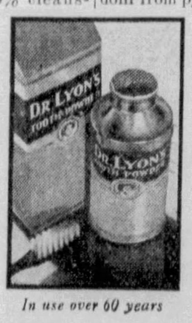
Dull Teeth Become White

For over SIXTY YEARS—dentists everywhere have prescribed Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, because—teeth simply cannot remain dull and film coated when it is used.

It cleans off all stains and tartar, and polishes the teeth in a harmless and practical way that leaves them sparkling—many shades whiter.

Dr. Lyon's is the only dentifrice old enough to prove it can be safely used for life. Free from all grit or pumice, it cannot possibly scratch, or injure the softest enamel, as years of constant use have shown.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder keeps your teeth REALLY CLEAN and clean teeth mean—firm, healthy gums, freedom from pyorrhea and the least possible tooth decay.



In use over 60 years

Lasts Longer—Costs Less

Once you use Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, you will never be satisfied to use anything else. It leaves your teeth feeling so much cleaner, your mouth so refreshed, and your breath so sweet and pure.

Dr. Lyon's is not only doubly efficient, but it costs only half as much to use. Even a small package lasts twice as long as a tube of tooth paste.

yard with a steeply inclined track for the little cars from the claypit; suburban stations with their rows of wives and daughters waiting in smart cars; hilly green open country, a tumbling brook, crags of rock, and a fleecy late afternoon sky. A cock pheasant, strolling across a pasture, heard the train and darted from view.

Charlie banged a strong fist down on the window-sill. "We'll settle this thing right now!" he muttered—"tonight!"

The Hemingways lived in a small yellow house on a side street not far from the public library. There was a tall hedge of privet in front, with a neat patch of lawn behind it. Mr. Hemingway worked about the place evenings and Saturdays, mowing the lawn, trimming the hedge, weeding the path that led in to the comfortable veranda, generally tinkering about.

He was a thin man of 40-something, but he appeared to be nearer 50-something. He had begun as a practicing lawyer, but found the industrial and financial world of today, with its infinitely complicated legal tangles, rather more than his sort of mind could keep pace with; accordingly, years back, he had settled down at a routine desk in the law department of an insurance company in the city. He was a good citizen; a steady worker in town and church affairs.

There were rather deep lines in his face. He seldom talked much. Like his Yankee neighbors, he kept his inner thoughts to himself. Charlie, during his 'teens when he and Sue were in high school and playing around together, had thought him a severe man; but later came to see that he was beaten down, shy, even (on rare occasions) wistful. Mr. Hemingway liked the boy, and let his feelings slip (on these rare occasions) in unexpected little confidences. Never with many words, of course—merely fleeting glimpses of what thoughts were stirring behind the patient eyes.

This, usually, in the evening, when he was fussing about the little front yard and Charlie was waiting for Sue to come downstairs. They always chatted about things, this middle-aged man and the red-headed boy. Sue always helped her mother with the dinner dishes, and dressed after that. And she always took her time about it. Nobody could hurry Sue. Even her own parents. That streak of independence, however, veiled by her easy good humar, colored everything the girl did.

On this particular evening, Charlie had to muster all his courage to set out, in the small car he was driving that year, toward the Hemingways. What if she should answer him with a decided, final "no"? She might. She certainly would if that happened to be how she felt at the moment. She always spoke and acted as she felt. Or kept still. She never weighed possible consequences of word or act, but lived, frankly and with a sort of unanswerable unconscious wisdom, in the moment, in the now.

DIFFICULT SITUATION

Charlie knew well enough that he was afraid of her. For a year he'd dodged the issue. She might laugh if he got serious. And he'd be tragically serious, once the ice was broken. He knew that. It was a weakness, probably. A failure in humor, or something. But he couldn't help it. He'd have to be himself. And his whole life was at stake. He knew he was old-fashioned about it, but couldn't help that, either.

If Mr. Hemingway hadn't been sitting on the old horse-block, Charlie would have driven desperately past the house. But he was seen, and had to pull up. Mr. Hemingway, in his shirt sleeves, with a rake lying across his gaunt knees, was turning the pages of a magazine; but before Charlie could descend from the car, he slipped the periodical under himself and sat on it.

"How are you, Charlie?" said he.

"Oh, so-so."

"How's business?"

"All right, I suppose." Charlie was in leather-soles-for-men's-shoes—but not very far in. It was just a job. But what could you do?

"Sue isn't down yet."

There was a long silence. Mr. Hemingway got out his pipe; scraped, knocked, filled and lit it. A shy grin touched the lean face. "Well," he remarked, "you almost caught me that time, Charlie."

"Caught you?"

"Yeah. At my secret vice."

INTERESTED IN BOATS

He produced the magazine. It was a publication dealing with yachts and motor-boats. "I buy these every month. Keep 'em in the barn . . ." He sighed. "I've never owned a boat, and never will. Not a chance. But I'm just enough of an old fool to look over the pictures and plans and go day-dreaming."

Charlie nodded sympathetically. Though himself a native of Coventry, his folks had come up from Cape Cod, where two grandfathers and a great-grandfather had commanded clipper ships on innumerable voyages around Cape Horn. The sea was in his blood. While his father and mother were living, they'd kept the old cottage on the Cape, and Charlie had handled a tiller and a sheet before he was 6. Later he'd gone on cruises as a member of amateur crews. He knew a little of coastwise navigation. It was really the one thing he'd dreamed of going into. But how could you? The sailing ships were gone. The steam was a machine proposition. There wasn't even a decent living in it, unless you got in at the office end.

"Here, now," Mr. Hemingway gazed hungrily at a photogravure of a 56-foot Diesel-motor cruiser. "That's something like! Just the right size. No bigger. I'd insist on handling her myself. Yet she'd have to be enough of a boat to stand up in a certain amount of offshore cruising."

DAUGHTER INTERRUPTS

Because he didn't think much of boats without sails, Charlie kept still. But his eyes rested with sudden eagerness on a 43-foot auxiliary schooner across the page. "With a trim little ship like that," he mused but not aloud, "you could go anywhere . . . Europe . . . Africa . . . Australia . . . 'round the world!"

"Great, if a man could afford it!" sighed Mr. Hemingway. "The roads are so cluttered up with cars, these days, it's no wonder folks are taking to the water. The lucky ones, I mean. It does take money. Trouble with all the rest of us is, we're just caught on the old treadmill. Yep, we're in harness. Live and die in it, I guess."

Sue found them sitting side by side on the horse-block. Mr. Hemingway hastily slipped the magazine again beneath his spare figure. Charlie and the girl drove away.

There was no getting around the fact that Sue was an extremely pretty girl. And you'd have to get around it (thus ran Charlie's gloomy musings) before you could even begin to deal sanely with her. She was rather dark, with an olive tint in her fine skin and with big, lustrous brown eyes. She had the rare gift of standing, moving, sitting with poise and with a definite grace. She was capable, too. Made her own clothes, and there wasn't a more daintily dressed girl in Coventry. She simply had a gift at design and color. A touch. That side of her always baffled him.

But she never seemed baffled. She took him as she took everything, even life itself—for granted. There was a slender beauty about her arms and hands as about her legs and feet. Her nose was straight, her face perfectly oval, her mouth an exquisitely chiseled center of disturbance. At least it disturbed Charlie—so deeply that he had never, of late years, kissed it. He just couldn't.

Other fellows had, of course, casually; just as he had kissed other girls. He'd had moments—his darker ones—when he could have murdered those other fellows. Sue wouldn't understand that. Facts never disturbed her. Natural facts. Whereas Charlie, deep in his rugged, determined somewhat Puritan nature (even a little twisted, perhaps, that nature; twisted, or unable quite to adapt itself to the easy-going times he lived in) . . . Charlie, I fear, fought the facts at times. His was fact-fighting blood. Nonconformist, roundhead blood.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

WOOD ST. AT SIXTH AVE. ATLANTIC 4600

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: The John Hutchins (he's the voice culturist) have reached the raiding stage, but she didn't find Norma Taylor . . . Whiteman called. Wanted you to know that your piece about Robert Braimes, who was saved from suicide last week, brought Paul so many calls to check if what you said was a fact, that he will play the chap's jazz concerto on his Sunday night b'cast . . . Ann Sutherland's little ham and egg spot in G'wich Village never misses handing out a free feed to a down-and-out actor . . . The letters that came testifying that Officer Conroy is an all-right cop and wouldn't insult truck drivers, let alone judges, have been forwarded to the Police Commissioner, as you instructed . . . I see the papers are taking it up editorially . . . Why doesn't Judge Hirshfield pick on a guy whose head is his size?

Johnny Green's "Night Club" as played at Carnegie by Paul was simply marvelous. The audience stamped their tootsies and cheered themselves hoarse . . . The Harold Sterns had a blessed "expense" Thursday morn. A 9 lb. gal . . . The prop of a fashionable Briarcliff spot was pinched Tuesday for bad-check passing. In custody of chief of cops there . . . If you would serve as arbiter of the war between the two Eddies—Cantor and Solomon, here's the dope . . . Tell them to quit their fight—over whose idea it is about dog act. The idea belongs to Gordon, whose dog act is famous . . . And Gordon has done the "bit" with actors on vaude bills for years. And to call Major Donovan at the Vaudeville Mgrs. Protective Ass'n, who settles all such disputes, Major D. can give them all the details.

Louis Sherwin, formerly of the Post, is Lowell Thomas' diggerupper . . . His pals never refer to Will Rogers as the humorist, star or millionaire. It's always "Will Rogers, the roper" . . . If a waiter is caught touching a corkscrew at the Paradise he is fired, so if there ever is a raid there—it'll be a frame! . . . Doug Fairbanks, Jr., phoned. Said that his wife, Joan Crawford, heard you on the air the Sunday when he was on a N. Y.-bound train, and that she wired him to be sure and thank you for trying to stifle the rumors about them . . . He said "it was nice of you"—and I told him that now and then you went out of your way to be pleasant—just to see how it was for a change.

With thanks to the gent who waited a week to fix the hole that made the draught, I now have a pip of a code in da node ad head . . . Here's something to chuck an orchid about. All applicants for aid from the Stage Relief Fund who apply at the New Amterdam are interviewed by stage stars! All of whom try to recognize them if they can, greet them by their first handles and try in every way to make them feel that they are not "less than something." June McCloy is arm-in-arming it again with the old heart, Johnny Whiting, in H'wood . . .

Kath Hadden says she's surprised at you for not knowing what Queen Mary's hats are made of . . . Kath said that since a child she was taught to believe that the Queen's lids were petrified layer cakes! . . . Here's a tip to radio moguls: Ronald Dawson of Station WOL (Baltimore) has a honey of a dramatic troupe on the air there . . . Incidentally, J. Carleton Beal finished a radio continuity and in 24 hours won 3 auditions on it . . . A remarkable record. It took an expert like Roy Octavus Cohen over a month and a half to get an audition for his first script. . . . Henry Hull's bad manners alienated the affection of the Philadelphia critics and drama editors after he flayed the town at the Poor Richard Club banquet last week. . . . The drama editors have rejected all photos and press agent items on his play, "Springtime for Henry," in which he appears . . . That's a shame, for the show is good, and why hurt the cast because Hull has no tact? . . . In fewer words, never knock a well-meaning friend and admirer "until he is away out of hearing!"

Hear that Billy Glason is planning to remarry—not the ex—but a Mrs. Goodrich . . . Adele Morel says she is having trouble with that Chas. Van Rensselaer, Jr., again. He wants to forget and forgive and she don't wanna . . . He's been dropped from the social register, by the way, because of the incident . . . An orchid to Bill Robinson for giving his home town, Richmond, Va., a traffic light to be erected at a busy corner for the safety of colored children who go to a school there. The corner was unprotected. The city accepted . . . There were a few 1913 Liberty head nickels, so that offer is okay.

Howard Wolf, columnist in Akron, reports that Mayor O'Brien is getting less fan mail than Walker or McKee and that it looks like New York will have to try you or Francis Lederer yet! . . . Spencer phoned. Said to eliminate all mention of Bernie on the air henceforth—most people like the cracks you both swap, but some still complain that "it's a shame the way you two make fun of each other" . . . So how've y'been? . . . as though the world (and radio) weren't dull enough! . . . In sum, the minority wins this time! . . . Ben will burn worse than ever. And how he'll miss that free advertising! — Your Girl Friday.

Soviet Fete On Screen

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Soviet Russia celebrates in Moscow the fifteenth anniversary of the revolution with one of the greatest demonstrations of all time, pictured in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. A massed band of more than 1,000 pieces blares forth the national anthem in the amazing scene. The Globe Trotter gives a graphic description of the tremendous celebration.

Equally impressive are scenes at St. Peter's in Rome following the issuance of the papal bull decreeing 1933 a holy year. Tolling of the great bells in the cathedral accompany the Pope's plea for world peace.

The Emperor of Japan, seated on a white charger, is seen welcoming back to Tokio the first detachment of Japanese troops that invaded Manchuria to establish the new state of Manchukuo.

Ignace Paderewski, noted pianist and former Premier of Poland, is seen and heard as he arrives in America to begin another concert tour at the age of 72. Talking on disarmament, he declares difficulty lies in the fact that one nation will judge it a good thing for the other fellow, but not for himself.

Uncle Sam's destroyers battle with imaginary enemy submarines off San Diengo, Cal., and give a demonstration of deep-sea bombing.

Dr. Fred Meyers, a graduate of Indiana University, appears at Madison Square Garden in New York as a professional wrestler against Sandor Szabo, of Hungary. The contest turns into a slugging match.

Colorful pictures show the opening of the racing season at Havana with many Americans in attendance.

Rum, Fright, In Davis

By MARY SHINE

Two features are being shown in the Davis, "Parachute Jumper" presents Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., as a flier and parachute jumper, first in the Army, then, being out of work, as a rum runner for a notorious leader of a dope and liquor ring. His role doesn't call for any interesting acting. Bette Davis, an unemployed stenographer, whom he meets on a park bench and with whom he falls in love, is insipid. For their dialogue there is a one-word description—moronic Frank McHugh, as the flier's pal, does most of the creditable acting.

There is much gunplay heroics, parachute jumping, and, of course, the romance, to finish up.

The second feature stars Gwili Andre, Frank Morgan and Gregory Ratoff, in "Secrets of the French Police," from articles in the American Weekly, distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. It is all about the grisly deeds of a maniac who hypnotizes Gwili, and presents her as the Princess Anastasia, of Russia, in order to get the Romanoff fortune. He does creepy things like embalming his victims and covering them with plaster of Paris to make them resemble statues Gwili's sweetheart, a thief, co-operates with police and she is found in the monster's laboratory when he is ready to make her into a statue.

When that's settled there's a "Loony Toon" to soothe your nerves.

MAGIC LANTERN -:- Visits to Film Studios With Busy Reporter -:- STAGE RESUMES

Peggy Views 6 A.M. With Alarm

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 30.

"Nine o'clock on the set! That means getting up at 6:30!"

Plainly dismayed, Peggy Hopkins Joyce discussed with me the hours she must keep as a talking picture star for the Paramount studio.

The scene of our little talk was dressing room 116. Marlene Dietrich and Maurice Chevalier are just down the way. The time was 2 p. m. I perched on a stool while Peggy sat before a dressing-table and allowed a studio hair-dresser to arrange her famous blonde locks. They were quite damp at the moment. As the girl slipped a black net over them and adjusted the turban-like hair-dryer, Peggy smiled.

"You are the first man," she said, "who ever saw me getting my hair done."

Just then the dryer started. To the tune of its steady hum (we sometimes had to shout), the interview continued.

Miss Joyce

"In New York," exclaimed Peggy, "I sleep until 11 o'clock. Why, it takes me half an hour to get my eyes open. I don't see how they expect anyone to look their best so early in the morning."

"How about night life? Parties?" I shouted.

"How can I?" answered Peggy. "Back East I have to have eight or nine hours' sleep. Here, I'm even sleepier. There'll be no time for me to entertain or go out much. Anyway, not until after my picture. This is my first, you know, and I'm nervous."

"What do you think of Hollywood men?"

"Don't know. Haven't met any but Joseph M. Schenck, Sidney Blackmer and a few others I already knew. But I'd like to meet some more."

"When will you get around to it?" I shouted.

"You tell me!" she exclaimed.

A few minutes later, as I left, George Raft came up and knocked on the door.

If you can believe Ann Harding, she did not see Harry Bannister, did not even attend his play while she was in the East. . . . Ran into Marlene Dietrich at Paramount. She wants me to say she is not trying to set a style with her trousers.

Ann Harding

"I want to wear them myself, not to get other women to!" she exclaimed.

It's a good deal easier to talk to the German star these days. She is less distrustful, and more friendly. And she seems very pleased about starting her picture today.

If Hoot Gibson can get away, he and Sally Eilers will take a trip to Havana after her new picture is finished. The canal trip is constantly gaining in popularity with the film folks. And they all are keen about the stopover in Cuba . . . Janet Gaynor, who has been voyaging in the other direction, will return from Honolulu February 6 to begin "Adorable" . . . Aline Carroll and Andy Devine are still seeing the sights together. They were at the fights the other evening . . . Very funny to see Sylvia Sidney lunching at Paramount in a flannel nightgown. Now it's to be Patricia Ellis instead of Kay Francis in "Narrow Corner."

Sylvia Sidney

Most of the orchestra leaders in town dropped in late at the Club Ballyhoo to pay honor to Ted Fiorito. Nacio Herb Brown, Con Conrad and several other composers also attended. Between Bert Wheeler, Lew Cody, Robert Woolsey, John P. Medbury and the rest, it was an evening not to miss. Ginger Rogers, Mervyn Leroy, Florine McKinney and Nat Goldstone stopped in for a while. Ginger is going into Merv's new picture, "Golddiggers of 1933." He didn't know it though until Darryl Zanuck told him.

Did you know that Warren Hymer attended 17 prep schools before entering Yale?

Players Ready to Act For Any Charity

The Civic Repertoire Players, composed of former members of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement Players and Co-operative Playhouse, announce willingness to present plays anywhere for any organization or club that will turn over the profits to a charitable purpose. The players work gratis, each having a means of livelihood other than the theater. Rehearsals for the opening production, a comedy, are now in progress. Engagement dates are open from the first week in March. Any club or institution interested may communicate with the group in care of the Morrowfield Hotel.

Just Waiting Around

MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN, M-G-M PLAYER, WHO'LL BE SEEN IN "TARZAN AND HIS MATE"

Plays and Players -:- By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Melody," operetta production of George White, will bring "flesh" back to the Nixon tonight after two weeks of shadow drama in that house. This Romberg-Carpenter-Casesar opus comes to Pittsburgh for the final week of its road tour prior to entering New York next week. It already has been seen in Philadelphia, Boston and Newark, so it may be assumed that the rough edges, if any, have been eliminated. In its principal roles will be Evelyn Herbert, Everett Marshall, Walter Woolf, Hal Skelly and Jeanne Aubert, all of whom have appeared here previously, although Mlle. Aubert, a French actress, has been here but once. Her only visit to Pittsburgh, two years ago, was as a member of the cast of "America's Sweetheart," an elaborate but short-lived musical comedy about Hollywood.

Eddie Cantor, star of stage, screen and radio, will head a vaudeville revue in Syria Mosque Thursday afternoon and evening. George Jessell, also a star of S. S. & R., will be first assistant in this program of skits and specialties, among which, of course, there will be the usual number of Cantor songs. Holland and Knight and the Four Abbotiers will be prominent in the stepping department. Others will include Colletta Ryan, "The Girl Prodigy;" Bobby Bixley, "The Legimaniast;" Professor Sauerpuss, Dorothy Bell and Benny Meroff's Orchestra. Eddie will be the M. C.

For just one brief week will the Nixon be without a screen attraction. It will light up the projection machine again next Monday night, when the sensational photoplay, "Cavalcade," by Noel Coward, will begin an engagement. After the opening performance, "Cavalcade" will be seen twice daily. Heading the cast of 31 speaking parts are Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook, who are supported principally by Ursula Jeans, Herbert Mundin, Una O'Connor, Frank Lawton, John Warburton and Margaret Lindsay.

Skipper Joe Hiller, of the Showboat, has his "Hot From Harlem" crew now working in a new routine of acts, but the performers remain the same, George Dewey Washington, the Four Blazers, Washboard Serenaders, Mary Dixon, Billy Maxey and Fletcher Senderson's orchestra. The show now begins at 11:30 p. m. instead of 12:30 midnight.

Seventeen roads-show units of "The Sign of the Cross" will be withdrawn at the end of this week, and the picture will be given general release later next month . . . Dick Powell will have one of the parts in a musical film, "High Life," to be produced by Warner Brothers . . . George Raft is working in two pictures at the same time, with Sylvia Sidney in "Pick Up," and with Miriam Hopkins in "The Story of Temple Drake" . . . Howard Hughes, producer of "Scarface," plans to begin filming a sequel to it in February . . . "Mayor of Hell" will be the next James Cagney picture, with Glenda Farrell opposite the star . . . "When Ladies Meet," current Broadway comedy hit, is reported to be in the bag for a film by M-G-M.

Screen

Diana Wynyard has the leading feminine role in "Cavalcade," photoplay by Noel Coward, coming to the Nixon next week.

Fay Wray Film Role Is Strangest

The strangest role ever assigned a woman is portrayed by Fay Wray in RKO Pictures', "King Kong."

Miss Wray is captured in the jungle by a giant ape, 26 feet tall, and while it holds her between its fingers as a boy would clasp a captured beetle, the gigantic thing becomes fascinated by her beauty!

Russian Play Put On At Y.M.H.A.

By GEORGE SEIBEL

If the audience had been allowed to vote after the performance of "Red Rust," put on by the Co-operative Playhouse of the Y. M. & W. H. A. on Saturday evening, and to be repeated tomorrow, they would probably have decided by a good majority that this drama was anti-Bolshevik propaganda. But it's by V. Kirchon and A. Ouspensky—and there is every reason to believe that they are good Communists, who wrote this play to show bad Communists up, so that the party may be purged of evil influences. The trouble is that the good influences are so feeble and scattered—so drowned in floods of vodka and profanity—that the spectator gets the idea that Soviet Russia is something like a madhouse where everybody shouts, wenches and souses, while wives are beaten or murdered as every-day routine.

Mr. Seibel

"Red Rust" was produced in New York by the Group Theater, sprung from the Theater Guild. It is a difficult play to produce, and a very unpleasant play no matter how well produced. Add to this that it is a very poor play of raw amateurish construction, which only begins to commence with the third act, and it is easy to see what the Co-operative Playhouse was up against. They did well under the direction of Arnold S. Berk—and the individual acting of Ralph H. Wilson, M. Bower Mazo, Mildred Baringoltz and Adelaide Lasner stood out in an ensemble where most of the individual players are lost.

The drama aims to show the depravity of Communistic elements who constitute the "red rust" that is eating away the strength of the party. There is much more depravity than saving grace, and the capitalist world need not worry if this is a true picture of Russia.

There is a great deal of soapboxery about the sacred cause, some of which has been soft-soaped by Alfred L. Goldenberg in rewriting the middle scene of Act 2.

Broadways of the World

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

HOTEL ESPLANADE, PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia: The money difficulties of this strange tour of mine are slowly but surely driving me daffy. I'm not referring to my own financial state, which is bad enough. I'm talking about the difficulties of foreign exchange in the present unsettled market and the trouble you encounter in each new land.

Figure it out for yourself. I landed first in Italy, where they handed me 20 lires for my American dollar. Just when I was growing accustomed to the handling of this money I moved on to Tunis, where they gave me 25 francs for each dollar.

I then moved on to France, where the rate of exchange is also 25 francs to the dollar. But the franc that is good in Tunis cannot be spent in Marseilles—although the franc that is good in Marseilles can most assuredly be spent in Tunis.

After France came Germany, where you are entitled to slightly more than four marks for every dollar. And you can take it from me that, after handing out lires as five cents and francs as four, it's no cinch to remember that the German coin of practically the same size is worth 25 cents.

After giving away far too much dough because I couldn't grow accustomed to the fact that a mark was practically a quarter, I finally made myself think before I paid a cab driver. The result was that I learned to handle the money. That took place one early morning and I left Germany a few hours later.

When I arrived in this city they gave me 33 crowns for a dollar. Thinking I was still in Germany, I gave the taxi driver who took me to the hotel one crown as a tip—and he almost hit me over the head with his meter. It was then I realized that a crown was only three cents, and that I'd have to start learning the money all over again.

The entire thing is all the more confusing because there is no end to it. My present plans, for instance, will take me from here to Austria. From Austria into Hungary. From Hungary through Jugo-Slavia. From Jugo-Slavia into Greece. From Greece into Turkey. And so on and so forth.

In order to find out exactly what I would be up against, I got me a newspaper and looked over the different exchanges in the different countries I planned to hit. After my 33 crowns to a dollar in this place, I find that I will get seven shillings for my dollar in Austria. That is, if I'm lucky.

Then comes Hungary, where I will be paid off in pengos at the rate of about 5½ pengos to the dollar. In other words, although the war is over, the pengo goes merrily marching on. Proving, of course, that the pengo is mightier than the sword.

I couldn't find anything in my newspaper about the Jugo-Slavian money, so I guess they pay off there in week-end trips. The next stop in the list is Greece, and that cops all the cake. They don't fool around down there; they go the entire route. For your American buck, you get 190 drachmas.

And so it goes. Lires, francs, marks, crowns, shillings, pengos, drachmas—and the end is far from being in sight. I'm sorry to write so much along these lines, but I had to get it off my chest. If it's tough reading, can you imagine how much tougher it is in the writing? . . .

Before I start speaking of Prague and Czechoslovakia, however, I'd like to round out this column with a few more observations on money matters.

The inflation periods in these various nations in Central Europe must have been more than terrible. I don't think that the average man on the street back home has any idea of what happened to these people, and I pray most sincerely that our country never gets any closer to inflation than it is now.

Inflation in Germany got out of hand, as it did in many other places. It meant that, if a man had worked all his life and had managed to save the equivalent of $50,000 for his old age, he awakened one morning to find that his wealth had shrunk to $25,000. If he was able to go to bed the next night, he awakened to find that he had but $5,000. And before he quite realized what had happened, everything was gone.

I had one man tell me, and I have no reason to doubt his word, that he was sitting in a beer garden in Munich when the German mark began to fall in alarming fashion. The garden was crowded with men and women when one of the owners stepped out and held up his hands for silence.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he shouted, "from now on, the price of each beer here will be one mark a glass."

A murmur of astonishment ran through the place. A mark for a glass of beer? Why, it was absurd! Before the murmur had died away, the same man was talking again.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he cried. "From now on, the price of each beer here will be 10 marks a glass!"

And so it went during the afternoon. Before you could drain your glass of beer the price went up 10 times. And nobody knew what the end might be. Eventually they all found out . . .

But enough of this. I'm leaving the money discussions to those who know far more about it, and switching abruptly to another subject for the remainder of this column. Did you ever know that it is a very difficult thing to be a cheap guy in a European hotel and get away with it? Well, it's true.

During good times—and the agreement is still being carried on in many hotels—the different porters in the various spots throughout Europe had their own association and their own signs. If a man was a good tipper and an excellent customer, the hotel label was pasted in a certain place on his bags or his luggage was marked with three small crosses. If he was fair, the label went on another spot and he received two crosses. If he was no good, he got but one cross, and the label was upside down.

CHEMIST'S TESTIMONY UNDER FIRE IN POISON TRIAL

Coolidge Doubted His Qualifications Until He Became President

CHAPTER XIV.

It was my intention when I became Vice President to remain in Washington, avoid speaking, and attend to the work of my office. But the pressure to speak is constant and intolerable. However, I resisted most of it. I was honored by the President by his request to make the dedicatory address at the unveiling of a bust of him in the McKinley Memorial at Niles, O. I also delivered the address at the dedication of the Grant Statue in Washington.

During these two years I spoke some and lectured some. This took me about the country in travels that reached from Maine to California, from the Twin Cities to Charleston. I was getting acquainted. Aside from speeches I did little writing, but I read a great deal and listened much. While I little realized it at the time, it was for me a period of most important preparation. It enabled me to be ready in August, 1923.

Too Much Expected

An extra session of the Congress began in April of 1921, which was almost continuous until March 4, 1923. While an enormous amount of work was done, it soon became apparent that the country expected too much from the change in administration. The government could and did stop the waste of the people's savings, but it could not restore them. That had to be done by the hard work and thrift of the people themselves. This would take time.

While the country was improving it was still depressed. There was some unemployment and a good deal of distress in agriculture because of the very low prices of farm produce and the shrinkage in land values. When I began to make political speeches in the campaign of 1922 I soon realized that the country had large sections that were disappointed because a return of prosperity had not been instantaneous. Moreover the people had little knowledge of the great mass of legislation already accomplished, which was to prove so beneficial to them within a few months in the future. After I had related some of the record of the relief measures adopted they would come to me to say they had never heard of it and thought nothing had been done. While my party still held both the House and Senate it lost many seats in the election, which made the closing session of Congress full of complaints tinged with bitterness against an administration under which many of them had been defeated. That being the natural reaction it is useless to discuss its propriety.

While these years in Washington [illegible]n full of interest they were not without some difficulties. Its official circles never accept any one gladly. There is always a certain unexpressed sentiment that a new arrival is appropriating the power that should rightfully belong to them. He is always regarded as in the nature of a usurper. But I think I met less of this sentiment than is usual, for I was careful not to be obtrusive. Nevertheless I could not escape being looked on as one who might be given something that others wished to have. But as it soon became apparent that I was wholly engaged in promoting the work of the Senate and the success of the administration, rather than my own interests, I was more cordially accepted.

Harding Becomes Ill

In these two years I witnessed the gigantic task of demobilizing a war government and restoring it to a peace-time basis. I also came in contact with many of the important people of the United States and foreign countries. All talent eventually arrives at Washington. Most of the world figures were there at the conference on limitation of armaments. Other meetings brought people only a little less distinguished. While I had little official connection with these events the delegates called on me and I often met them on social occasions.

The efforts of President Harding to restore the country became familiar to me. I saw the steady increase of the wise leadership of Mr. Hughes and Mr. Mellon in the administration of the government and the passing of some of the veteran figures of the Senate. Chief among these was Senator Knox, of Pennsylvania. He was a great power and had a control of the conduct of the business of the Senate, which he exercised in behalf of our party policies, that no one else approached during my service in Washington.

In the winter of 1923 President Harding was far from well. At his request I took his place in delivering the address at the budget meeting. While he was out again in a few days he never recovered. As Mrs. Coolidge and I were leaving for the long recess on the 4th of March I bade him goodbye. We went to Virginia Hot Springs for a few days and then returned to Massachusetts, where we remained while I filled some speaking engagements, and in July went to Vermont. We left the President and Mrs. Harding in Washington. I do not know what had impaired his health. I do know that the weight of the presidency is very heavy. Later it

RAIDERS KEEP LID TIGHT ON RESORTS

Sleuths Invade Three As Monaca Club Closing Sequel

The lid on Pittsburgh rackets was tighter today after three County Detective raids echoed the State Troopers' surprise invasion of Oakland's Monaca Club Friday night.

The pressure of Judge Frank P. Patterson was felt again early yesterday as the county detective's four horsemen, led by Frank Ritz, surprised dancing couples at the Venetian Gardens, Mt. Nebo road, Ross Township, while the "night number" was being drawn.

SEE NUMBER SPUN

The county sleuths arrived in time to see another winning number spun from the wheels at 401 Freeland street, late Saturday night, and dispersed 60 persons, they reported.

The detectives also visited Eddie Peyton's road house in the Steubenville pike. They found no violations, but stopped the dance at midnight.

Earlier in the evening the raiders visited an alleged drinking resort at 1301 Colwell street, where Ralph Morroco, alleged proprietor, was arrested and a quantity of liquor was seized, according to detectives.

Arthur Salvador, alleged proprietor of the Venetian Gardens, ran into the arms of Detective Ritz as he fled from the rear door of the establishment, the detectives reported. He was arrested, charged with violating the Snyder Act. Thirty merry-making guests were routed and liquor was reported seized by the detectives.

WHEELS SEIZED

Four wheels, an adding machine, the proceeds and numerous books and slips were seized at the Freeland street address, the detectives reported. Max Verone, 42, and Charles Lonzo, 40, were taken to detective headquarters. They were to be arraigned today.

Four visitors were driven out at the Colwell street address, the detectives said. Liquor was reported seized.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park remained in his office until 2 o'clock yesterday morning to receive the raiders' reports.

Padlock proceedings were expected today against the Forbes street address of the Monaca Club. The raid Friday night climaxed several verbal attacks on it by Judge Patterson, who retires this week as presiding Judge of Criminal Court.

CHILD RESCUES 3 FROM FIRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Eileen Murphy, who is only 10, fought her way through smoke and flame today and saved three small brothers from death.

Eileen was left in charge of the little boys when her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Murphy, went to visit neighbors. About 1 a. m., after she had dozed for a few moments, she awoke to find smoke filling the room from a fire beneath the floor.

A crib on which Edmund Murphy, 2, was lying, was aflame. Picking up Edward she ran out on a second story veranda and deposited him. Then she ran back through the smoke and flame and carried out John, 6, and James, 5.

Standing on the veranda, she screamed for help, until firemen came and carried her and her brothers down ladders. Eileen insisted on being saved last. John suffered serious burns of the legs, while James was less seriously burned.

Convicted Ex-Banker Free on $15,000 Bond

Ansley D. Smith, former cashier of the closed Citizens Trust Company, of Bellevue, was released from county jail on $15,000 bond yesterday following his conviction in Criminal Court Saturday on 15 counts of embezzlement and five of making false entries.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Jan. 30.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

The British Ambassador is a mighty popular man guest of the Senate, guest of the President that's on deck waiting to go to bat. The poor French Ambassador, you can't help but feel kinder sorry for him. He is still in the dog house. A Senator named Tydings the other day introduced a bill where the government couldn't appropriate more money than was coming in, that is, if you didn't have any money you could not dole out any. Well, the Senate like to mobbed him, they called the idea treason, sacreligious, inhuman, and taking the last vestige of power from a politician, that is the right to appropriate your money which you don't have.

Will Rogers

Yours, WILL.

'KISS OF DEATH' JINX BROKEN

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—(Universal.)—It took Sol Feldman to break the hoodoo that had clung so tenaciously to Margaret Mary Collins, known throughout Chicago's underworld as "The Kiss of Death."

The symbol of bad luck, Margaret's sweethearts had all gone the violent way of gangsters.

There were Jack Sheehy, Dion O'Banion, "Sonny" Schlig, Johnny Phillips, "Jew" Bates, "Red" McLaughlin and Sam Katz.

The eighth, Sol, was shot by a policeman while stealing a fur coat. As Margaret began to attend him, his condition grew worse. Then he recovered.

DR. M'FARLAND NAMES AIDES

Dr. William W. McFarland, director of the city's health department, announced today the appointment of two physicians as medical supervisors in the Bureau of Child Welfare.

The two physicians receiving the appointments are Dr. C. H. Hayes, 3814 Winterburn avenue, and Dr. H. M. Rauch, 1315 Brownsville road. Both Dr. Hayes and Dr. Rauch have been employed in the health department since 1910, Dr. McFarland says.

The two vacancies were caused by the appointment of Dr. McFarland to the health department directorship and the resignation of Dr. T. M. Moore. Medical supervisors receive $3,000 yearly.

END DOW DRUG RECEIVERSHIP

The receivership of the Dow Drug Company of Delaware, a corporation with 14 stores in Allegheny County, is to terminate at midnight tomorrow under an order signed by Judge F. P. Schoonmaker in United States Court today.

All assets and property are to be transferred to the officers of the corporation by Joseph R. Knock, receiver, who was appointed October 31, 1932.

The petition for the order of termination stated it would be to the best interests of all creditors and stockholders, as the corporation is now making a small profit and real estate rentals were adjusted during the receivership.

The company was put into receivership in an equity suit by the Dow Drug Company, an Ohio corporation, which was a creditor. The Ohio firm joined with the receiver in recommending the end of the receivership.

Boy Bitten by Rat Found by Hill Police

A 7-year-old boy who said he was Theodore Roosevelt, a Negro, of 1542 Webster avenue, was found wandering in the Hill district by radio policemen early today, blood gushing from a wound on his left thumb. He said:

"A rat bit me and it woke me up."

The boy said his father worked at night and his mother was "out some place." The wound was treated at West Penn Hospital and Theodore was sent to Juvenile Detention Home.

Pittsburgh Man Injured by Auto

BALTIMORE, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—A hitch-hiker identified as Stanley Kazlack, 50, of Pittsburgh, is in a serious condition in St. Agnes' Hospital here from injuries received when struck last night by an automobile as he was walking along the Washington-Baltimore boulevard.

DEFENSE FOR 2 WOMEN CALLS DOCTORS

Further Dispute Due As to How Boys Met Death

Defense efforts in the murder trial of Mrs. Mary Chalfa and Mrs. Anna Allas, of Munhall, today centered in an effort to show stannous chloride or tin salt alleged to have been found in the body of Stephen Allas, 12, was introduced through instruments made in the chemical test.

The trial entered its second week today. The women are accused of having poisoned the boy, a stepson of Mrs. Allas, in an effort to collect insurance.

Dr. Alexander Lowry, professor of organic chemistry, University of Pittsburgh, was the first defense scientific witness. Assistant District Attorney John Haggerty questioned Lowry's experience as a toxicologist.

The defense, through Lowry, sought to show the possibility that the tin salt poisoning alleged to have been found by F. C. Buckmaster, county chemist, had come from the apparatus used in making the chemical test. Lowry testified the apparatus was tin coated and could have been worn off. The witness testified using the apparatus Saturday afternoon.

Buckmaster, called to the stand, said Lowry had taken a spot test by putting a drop of hydrochloric acid on the metal. The test failed to show any dissolving, he said. A second and stronger test showed tin in a metallic state, he said.

The state's case is based on the testimony of Mrs. Gizella Young, fortune teller who testified the two women confessed to her the poisoning of Steve and his brother, Andrew, 16, for whose deaths they were indicted. Other witnesses testified the two women held large insurance policies of the two youths in which they were named beneficiaries.

The defendants, denying all charges, have related a strange tale of charms and spells cast over them by the fortune teller which, they said, forced them to do her bidding.

Handcuffed Man Rescued by Police

South Side police raced to the Carrick car barns yesterday to retrieve his handcuffs which another officer said he had left in a wash room there and which were wound about the wrists of an inquisitive motorman, George Pavouska.

After he had been freed, Pavouska explained he was "playing" with the manacles, which had been left by Patrolman Harvey Rupert, who patroled the car barn beat.

Mr. Bullitt's Powder May Be Extremely Wet

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

We're trying to find out whether Bullitt is soft-nosed, dum-dum or just merely spent.

He is unofficial European scout for the unofficial spokesman of the unofficial White House.

There's a title you will never find on a loving cup. Unless somebody claims him in 30 days he will be raffled off at a blind auction.

Col. House says he never heard of him, but admits he snores. Mr. Roosevelt disclaims all responsibility. He is the only Bullitt we heard of that aimed itself.

Since Bullitt went to Europe to talk war debts two cabinets have collapsed with the roar of riven cellophane. The French and the German cabinets went out like the cat at midnight.

No wonder nobody will claim Bullitt. Such popularity must be deserted.

JOSEPH SCULLY, 10,...CAN MY DOG JOIN UP, TOO, PLEASE?

Boy Wants to Form Charleroi Branch To Aid Needy

Enthusiasm over the new comic strip "Junior" by Quin Hall appearing in the Sun-Telegraph, was manifsted by the receipt of two postcards from boys desiring to join the "Junior Patrol."

Although the pledge cards for members of the "Junior Patrol" did not appear in the paper until today, Martin Rosenberg, 12, of 415 Fallowfield avenue, Charleroi, and Joseph Scully, 10, of 130 South Negley avenue, sent in their requests to become members of the new club last Thursday, two days before the membership card was published. This card appeared in Saturday's strip.

The "Junior Patrol" is to help others at home, at play and at school. Martin Rosenberg, who was the first boy to send in his request to join the "Patrol," wrote:

"I would like to start this club of collecting potatoes from boys and girls. If you don't have a club in Charleroi yet, please send me information how to start it and how to keep it going. I am 12 years old and I want to help the needy."

Joseph Scully, who is also anxious to help the needy, was the second boy to send a request to join the "Patrol." He said today:

"I always like to do other people a good turn. It's really fun. Today I dusted the furniture, swept the walks and went to the store for mother. Besides doing things for mother and dad each day, I want to do something for other people also."

4 Face Deportation In P.O. Work Probe

Four men arrested, charged with illegally entering the United States, faced deportation today as a drive opened against the employment of unnaturalized citizens and nonresidents of Pittsburgh on the new postoffice construction.

The four were arrested following complaints filed by Miss Emmelinne Pitt, local commissioner of the United States Department of Labor. They said they were Antonio Lili, Francisco Romano, Reimandi Oliviera and Girardo Romano. They were lodged in county jail.

200 Robins Pay Visit To Elfinwild Home

Spring must be coming back again.

Mrs. W. C. Richey, Behaven avenue, Elfinwild, reported yesterday that a flock of at least 200 robins descended from somewhere and roosted in trees in the rear of her home Saturday, and stayed all night.

Yesterday she fed them, and for a time the back yard was filled with birds.

Many of the visitors were still on hand when the breakfast bell tolled this morning and got a good feed.

Runaway for Hair Wave, Blonde, 12, Found Here

Vivian Harding, 12, blonde high school girl, was back in her home at New England, Pa., today—her quarrel with her mother over a hair wave apparently forgotten.

The girl disappeared Sunday a week ago yesterday.

She was arrested yesterday by city detectives after the proprietor of a downtown lodging house, suspicious of her age, refused to rent her a room and called police. When taken to Central Police Station she said she was "Vivian Harding, 18, of Salem, O."

Her father, Charles P. Harding, called at the police station last night, identified the girl and took her home.

'APOSTLE OF CHEER' FINDS CONTENTED LOT IN SHANTYTOWN

'WHITE COLLAR' MAN SUFFERS, SAYS YOUNG

Vash Young, apostle of cheer and fearlessness in the face of economic disturbance, met philosophers of another sort today. He found them in a shantytown down by the railroad tracks.

These shanty philosophers, Young said, seemingly had no need for his message. They apparently thought so, too. They grinned, sprightly, contentedly; said their huts were warm and they usually could find enough to eat, and "bummed" a few cigarets.

Young is to speak tonight at Carnegie Music Hall. His subject will be "Let's Start Over Again, Pittsburgh." He will address his words, he said, to the many in despair as a result of the depression. He is author of the books, "A Fortune to Share" and "Let's Start Over Again."

Young was impressed by the air of contentment in the shanties between Penn avenue and the Allegheny River. He saw the problems there far less worrisome, he said, than those of the "white collar" class with reduced incomes and many demands on their purses. He said:

"These men have reduced their material belongings and needs to a minimum, while a man used to living in comfort is having more difficulty in maintaining his situation."

Young suggested a formula for one's worries. It is this:

"Set aside a worry period every day. Right after dinner, for instance. When worry time comes around, do it up right and then forget it. If at any other time you think of something to worry about, make notes of it, and save the notes for future reference."

1 KILLED, 4 HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Melvin Scott, 30, of 7120 Wipple street, was killed, William VanBuskirk was injured seriously, and three others were injured slightly when two automobiles crashed head-on in Laketon road, Wilkinsburg yesterday, according to a police report.

The other injured are Ralph Scott, 20, of 318 Meade street; W. E. Brown, 55, of 652 Maryland avenue, and his wife, Mrs. Georgia C. Brown. The accident occurred on a curve near Grand boulevard, police reported.

All Police to Get New 'Fixless' Tags

All city police will finally have the new so-called "fixless" tags for motorists by Wednesday, according to announcement from the City Controller's office today. First distribution of the tags was to traffic policemen under Inspector Jacob Dorsey. The Controller's office announced it has received $1,485 in fines on the new tags since their first distribution.

Your Income Tax

How to Avoid Error In Computing Rate Of Surtax

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

This is the seventh of a series of articles analyzing the Revenue Act of 1932 and discussing the problems of income tax payers.

Many income tax payers make mistakes in computing the surtax which must be paid on their incomes. Frequently taxpayers apply the maximum surtax rate instead of the rates applying to each successive bracket of their incomes.

Form 1040, the blank to be used in reporting incomes which reach surtax proportions, has a table showing the various steps of the surtax rates so that it is necessary only to compute the tax on the income in the final bracket and to add this to the tax shown in the table for the bracket just under the amount of taxable income.

The following is an example of the method of computing the tax on a net income of $14,500 for a taxpayer who is single and has no dependents:

Net income	$14,500
Less personal exemption	1,000
Balance taxable	$13,500
4 per cent tax on first $4,000	160
6 per cent tax on balance of $9,500	760
Surtax of $140 on $14,000 (shown by table) plus 4 per cent on $500 excess of that amount	160
Total normal tax and surtax	$ 1,080

In previous years taxpayers were allowed an earned income credit. This has been entirely omitted from the Revenue Act of 1932.

Student in Austin Sends Solution 1,500 Miles

Science, like love, "will find a way."

The following story is going the rounds of the Carnegie Tech campus today:

An enterprising freshman engineering student received a calculus problem from his mathematics professor which was too difficult. He took it to James Breslove, of 5416 Plainfield street, a former Tech student, who spends his idle hours tinkering with a short wave radio set. Breslove couldn't solve it, either.

Exasperated, he finally appealed for help over the air waves. He succeeded in contacting E. C. Fletcher, a student at the University of Texas, away down in Austin. The solution promptly came back in dot dash style through the ether.

The Tech frosh, who does not want his name printed because of what the professor might do, never goes to class with an unsolved math problem these days. He gets them solved in Austin, 1,500 miles away.

RAPS SCHOOL BOARD MOVE

Strong opposition to political control of Pittsburgh's public schools was voiced last night in an address by the Rev. Dr. Clarence Edward Macartney in the First Presbyterian Church to a large assemblage of teachers.

Denouncing moves to substitute an elected school board for the appointive one, he said:

"It is by an aroused and awakened intelligent public sentiment that the paralyzing hand of the ward politician shall be kept off the splendid school system we now possess."

Dr. Macartney also deplored unwarranted curtailment of school expenses because of the economic situation, declaring it costly to injure the generation of tomorrow.

FOOTBALL STAR SUED BY WIFE FOR DIVORCE

Cleveland Lawrence Cook, Jr., may have been captain and star fullback of Washington and Jefferson College's football team, but his wife, Mrs. Lillian M. Cook couldn't keep him in training after they married, she testified as she sought a divorce from him in Common Pleas Court today.

Mrs. Cook told Judge Elder W. Marshall that Cook didn't even keep one foot on the water wagon. He frequently struck her, she said. She is a pretty brunet, and small. He stood 5 feet, 10 inches in height, weighed 190 pounds, she said.

Cook's alleged drunkeness, keystone of his wife's complaints, extended through the day the daughter was born, two years ago, she declared. Then, she said, the former football star was found in a downtown hotel, drunk and getting along quiet nicely.

Mrs. Cook and the daughter live at the Pennsylvania Apartments, 4403 Center avenue.

Engineers to Hear Technocracy Talks

An answer to technocracy is to be given by four prominent Pittsburgh engineers at a luncheon meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Thursday. The speakers will be George S. Davison, president of the Davison Coke and Iron Company; Frank J. Chesterman, vice president of the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania; E. C. Stone assistant to the president of the Philadelphia Company, and Nathan B. Jacobs, president of Morris Knowles, Inc.

The last time he went up, he was trapped, found Miss Sara Ginsberg, 25, helping firemen rescue her over ladders. This is a Sun-Telegrahp picture.

BABY BROTHER CRIES FOR LOST CHILD

Search was continued today for little Lawrence (Jimmy) Morrow, aged 4, who disappeared yesterday from his home, 1429 Reedsdale street. His mother, tired and weary after a night of anxiety, said brokenly:

"It is terrible when you think he might be out in this cold with nothing to eat."

Neither Mrs. Morrow, her brother nor mother, who live in a houseboat at the foot of Chateau street, believe the child was drowned. The brother, John Bruckemiller, explained:

"He came down to the boat every day and never ventured to the river bank unless one of us was watching him from the boat. He was very careful for one so small."

Meanwhile, at their home, Joseph, 2, the missing boy's brother, cries wistfully.

"Dimmy, Dimmy!"

The baby sister, Martha, aged 6 months, sucks her thumb and gurgles hopefully.

CALVIN COOLIDGE'S OWN LIFE STORY

was disclosed that he had discovered that some whom he had trusted had betrayed him and he had been forced to call them to account. It is known that this discovery was a very heavy grief to him, perhaps more than he could bear. I never saw him again. In June he started for Alaska and—eternity.

Hard Work Rewarded

It is a very old saying that you never can tell what you can do until you try. The more I see of life the more I am convinced of the wisdom of that observation.

Surprisingly few men are lacking in capacity, but they fail because they are lacking in application. Either they never learn how to work, or, having learned, they are too indolent to apply themselves with the seriousness and the attention that is necessary to solve important problems.

Any reward that is worth having only comes to the industrious. The success which is made in any walk of life is measured almost exactly by the amount of hard work that is put into it.

It has undoubtedly been the lot of every native boy of the United States to be told that he will some day be President. Nearly every young man who happens to be elected a member of his state Legislature is pointed to by his friends and his local newspaper as on the way to the White House.

My own experience in this respect did not differ from that of others. But I never took such suggestions seriously, as I was convinced in my own mind that I was not qualified to fill the exalted office of President.

I had not changed this opinion after the November elections of 1919, when I was chosen Governor of Massachusetts for a second term by a majority which had only been exceeded in 1896.

When I began to be seriously mentioned by some of my friends at that time as the Republican candidate for President, it became apparent that there were many others who shared the same opinion as to my fitness which I had so long entertained.

But the coming national convention, acting in accordance with an unchangeable determination, took my destiny into its own hands and nominated me for Vice President.

Sought Advice

Had I been chosen for the first place, I could have accepted it only with a great deal of trepidation, but when the events of August, 1923, bestowed upon me the presidential office, I felt at once that power had been given me to administer it. This was not any feeling of exclusiveness. While I felt qualified to serve, I was also well aware that there were many others who were better qualified. It would be my province to get the benefit of their opinions and advice. It is a great advantage to a President, and a major source of safety to the country, for him to know that he is not a great man. When a man begins to feel that he is the only one who can lead in this republic, he is guilty of treason to the spirit of our institutions.

After President Harding was seriously stricken, although I noticed that some of the newspapers at once sent representatives to be near me at the home of my father in Plymouth, Vt., the official reports which I received from his bedside soon became so reassuring that I believed all danger past.

Becomes President

On the night of August 2, 1923, I was awakened by my father coming up the stairs calling my name. I noticed that his voice trembled. As the only times I had ever observed that before were when death had visited our family, I knew that something of the gravest nature had occurred.

His emotion was partly due to the knowledge that a man whom he had met and liked was gone, partly to the feeling that must possess all of our citizens when the life of their President is taken from them.

But he must have been moved also by the thought of the many sacrifices he had made to place me where I was, the 25-mile drives in storms and in zero weather over mountain roads to carry me to the academy and all the tenderness and care he had lavished upon me in the 38 years since the death of my mother in the hope that I might sometime rise to a position of importance, which he now saw realized.

He had been the first to address me as President of the United States. It was the culmination of the lifelong desire of a father for the success of his son.

He placed in my hands an official report and told me that President Harding had just passed away. My wife and I at once dressed.

Before leaving the room I knelt down and, with the same prayer with which I have since approached the altar of the church, asked God to bless the American people and give me power to serve them.

My first thought was to express my sympathy for those who had been bereaved and after that was done to attempt to reassure the country with the knowledge that I proposed no sweeping displacement of the men then in office and that there were to be no violent changes in the administration of affairs. As soon as I had dispatched a telegram to Mrs. Harding, I therefore issued a short public statement declaratory of that purpose.

Dad Administered Oath

Meantime, I had been examining the Constitution to determine what might be necessary for qualifying by taking the oath of office. It is not clear that any additional oath is required beyond what is taken by the Vice President when he is sworn into office. It is the same form as that taken by the President.

Having found this form in the Constitution I had it set up on the typewriter and the oath was administered by my father in his capacity as a notary public, an office he had held for a great many years.

The oath was taken in what we always called the sitting room by the light of the kerosene lamp, which was the most modern form of lighting that had then reached the neighborhood. The Bible which had belonged to my mother lay on the table at my hand. It was not officially used, as it is not the practice in Vermont or Massachusetts to use a Bible in connection with the administration of an oath.

Besides my father and myself, there were present my wife, Senator Dale, who happened to be stopping a few miles away, my stenographer and my chauffeur.

The picture of this scene has been painted with historical accuracy by an artist named Keller, who went to Plymouth for that purpose. Although the likenesses are not good, everything in relation to the painting is correct.

OLD SORES

Wouldn't you be glad to learn how the pain and itching of old Sores, Ulcers and Itching Rashes can be stopped and the Sores healed in a few days? An amazing ointment is now doing these very things, and here's an instance:

"For 7 years I suffered untold agony with a Varicose Ulcer on my ankle. The first application of PETERSON'S OINTMENT took all pain away. In 4 weeks the ulcer healed up completely. I simply cannot say too much for your ointment."—Mrs. Fred R. Voight, 11 Telford St., Newark, N. J.

No wonder over 500,000 people to date have used PETERSON'S OINTMENT to make their skin gloriously smooth, healthy and free from Sores. You can do the same for only 35c at any drug store in America.

Why Children's Colds are best treated externally...

A child's stomach is delicate, and constant dosing often leads to a digestive upset. Besides, "dosing" is indirect treatment for a cold. Too often, it does actual harm—spoils appetite and lowers body strength when it is most needed to resist disease.

For these reasons, mothers the world over prefer Vicks VapoRub, the modern treatment for children's colds. VapoRub is external—you just rub it on! It can be used freely—and as often as needed—even on the youngest child. Absolutely safe—and doubly effective!

ATTACKS COLDS 2 WAYS AT ONCE

Applied over throat and chest at bedtime, Vicks acts through the skin like a poultice or plaster. At the same time, soothing medicated vapors are released by body-warmth and inhaled direct to irritated air-passages. The child relaxes—sleeps soundly—and usually by morning the worst of the cold is over.

Nothing else gives this unique direct double-action of VapoRub. Nothing else gives the same sure relief. Two generations of mothers have tested and proved Vicks VapoRub as best for children's colds. Over 26 million jars are used yearly.

FOR DEEP-SEATED COLDS

Stronger Stimulative Action—When there is much tightness or soreness, redden the skin with hot, wet towels before applying VapoRub—then spread it on thick.

Stronger Vapor Action—When the air-passages are badly clogged—or there is much irritation or coughing—also melt a spoonful of VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water and inhale the steaming medicated vapors for several minutes.

FURTHER SOLUTION OF MOTHERS' PROBLEM OF COLDS

VapoRub is the foundation of the new Vicks Plan for better Control of Colds. In clinical tests among thousands last winter—in schools, colleges and homes—Vicks Plan reduced the number and duration of colds by half!—saved almost two-thirds of time lost from school due to colds!—cut the costs of colds more than half!

How to follow Vicks Colds-Control Plan in your home is fully explained in each package of Vicks VapoRub and Vicks Nose & Throat Drops—the new aid in preventing colds.

Jealousy Brings Its Victims Nothing But Misery

What is jealousy?

Is it the sign of a deep, true love? And should you feel flattered by it?

Or is it vicious self-indulgence, which any sensible person should resent?

Lotta would like to know. The Boy Friend is making life miserable for her, and thinks she should like it!

"Because," sez he, "I'm just taking care of you. I'm jealous because I love you!"

Have you heard, or have you used, a line like that, yourself, to justify common cussedness?

Dear Elsie:

I have a problem that is bothering me a lot. I know you help others, and I hope you will help me to decide what's what. I work in a place where there are a lot of both men and women. It is a big place, and we have a lot of delivery men. My job compels me to come into contact with these fellows all day long.

The man I go with is very jealous, and ever since I have had this job it has caused trouble between us, because he is sure that these fellows are trying to "make" me—which isn't true. They're friendly, and kid me a good deal, but they're all decent, and they respect me and would not think of saying anything out of the way to me. But he won't believe that.

He doesn't want me to be where I come into contact with other men at all. He has a fit if I speak to some fellow on the street, and he nags me all the time about these fellows where I work.

Also, he insists that I am lying to him when I say the men where I work never try to get "fresh."

DOUBTS TRUTH

Every evening when he comes to see me, the first question he asks is "Did anyone bother you today?" I always tell him "no," and it is the truth. But that isn't enough for him. It always starts an argument—an argument that often ends in a regular quarrel.

I know that he loves me and I love him, but it is awfully hard to have him always so jealous and suspicious, and to have him refuse to take my word when I tell him that no one has annoyed me. He insists that I am just "trying to shield them." It is awfully hard to have him so jealous because other men speak to me.

Please help me, and tell me what to say to him, or what to do, so that he will quit feeling that way. Is he like that because he loves me so much? He says he is. What shall I do?

LOTTA.

What shall you do?

Use your head, youngster, and fight his stupid malice with good, hard, common sense. You know, as well as I, that jealousy isn't a sign of love, and that it buys nothing but misery.

If this man really loved you, he wouldn't make you wretched by his nagging suspicions, his meddling tantrums. He would believe you when you told him the truth. He would show his respect for you by trusting you to take care of yourself.

LOVES ONLY HIMSELF

He doesn't love you and he isn't worrying about you. He loves only himself, and he is worrying about himself. He feels that you are his property—his admiring audience—and he must have an audience to gratify his conceit. He must assert his power over someone to prove what a Wonderful Hero he is.

In his secret heart he is really afraid that someone may dent his dignity, and so he "puts you over the hurdles," sissy, to soothe that fear.

Don't let him do it. Tell him, once and for all, that he'll have to behave like a regular human being, and treat you accordingly—or move on. And then stick by your word.

What'll he do? I don't know. Perhaps he'll reform. If he does, do everything in your power to show your tenderness and pride in him.

And perhaps he won't? Well, if he won't—if he's neither smart enough nor strong enough to behave like a man—isn't it time you knew it, before you tie yourself up to a lifetime of abuse?

Even 'Yes' Man Takes Pride in Fact He Oft Says 'No,' Avers Fay King

By FAY KING

Nothing is more important in the career of a successful "yes" man than to say "no" sometimes.

For the boss who likes to surround himself with "yes" men denies this, and always points out that these amiable assistants do NOT always agree with him.

Even the "yes" man takes pride in the fact that he often says "no." But he is very expert in knowing exactly when it is more agreeable to disagree.

A "yes" man will never risk saying "no" to any injustice or pet prejudice of his boss.

But he will readily risk a hearty, "no" when his boss is enthusiastic, feeling quite safe that such a boss will never resent being curbed in an impulsive generosity he may repent later.

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Dicky's Smoldering Jealousy Breaks Forth

It had come—the issue that I had subtly dreaded ever since we all had rushed to Sackettsville at the news that Marion and Carolyn had been lured away from Whitney Hall by kidnapers! I had known, I think, from the first moment of Hugh Grantland's arrival upon the scene, that sooner or later Dicky's antipathy to the army officer, born of his old jealousy, would assert itself.

"I don't know what you mean, Dicky," I parried. "I haven't any plans to help anybody, except to be ready for whatever necessity arrives. Isn't that all that anybody can do?"

"Don't stall!" he said with sudden fierceness. "You can't stand it unless you're in the forefront of the battle, with pennons floating from every button hole. Look at that stunt you pulled last night, for which, I suppose, you'll receive the Croix de Guerre from the military! With two able young men at hand, you had to cavort up the mountains on a bicycle, and nearly get yourself killed in the process.

MADGE UNEMOTIONAL

"Now I'm here to remark that this particular form of damfoolishness is going to stop. I don't care if the whole United States army is drawn up presenting dipped flags to you, for the rest of this affair, you're going to stay put with the rest of the women. This happens to be a man's job, and I'm not going to have you gumming up the works. D'ye hear?"

If I had not sensed that his words were much more brutal than his tones or his thoughts, and known also that jealous love for me mingled with anxiety for my safety was responsible for his outburst, I should have twisted myself from his hold and fled from the room, ignoring his ultimatum. But his raucous tones were unsteady, and the eyes that held mine were strained, miserable, anxious.

Besides, I reminded myself—though I did not need the reminder, for the thought was ever before me—that he was going away on a flight, always most terrifying to me. He might never return. I must say nothing to anger him further, but I had a mighty struggle with myself before I could swallow the insulting words and answer him with the lightness that I have learned is my best weapon against his curlishness.

"I'll admit the bicycle stunt was a bit—flamboyant," I said, seizing upon the lesser issue, in the hope that he might forget the greater, "but there had to be some man left at the hotel and I couldn't let Ronald go alone. But I'll promise to ride no more bicycles."

HUSBAND FURIOUS

Dicky's eyes narrowed and his facial muscles tightened, instead of relaxing, as I had hoped.

"You're clever," he said as if he grudged the words, "but it won't do you any good. I have sense enough myself to know that the bicycle stunt is washed up, that you probably won't ride another one until you begin to teach Faith how. That isn't what I'm talking about. It's this mess they're cooking up for tonight.

"No matter who plans your presence, there's to be no advancing under fire and under the direction of a strategic genius for you. You're to stay quietly at the hotel. There'll be plenty for you to do there, getting ready to take care of the girls. They probably will be in pretty bad shape by the time we get 'em out."

"Won't they need one of us—some woman—with them?" I asked, and for an instant I thought Dicky was going to strike me, his face was so dark and savage.

"There you go!" he exclaimed. "They have mothers, haven't they? Why should you go?"

I saw a possible exit and traveled toward it.

"If either mother is able to go on that rescue party, I shall gladly stay at the hotel," I said, and waited fearfully for Dicky's reply.

How to Keep Well -:-

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Old-Fashioned 'Croup Kettle' Recommended

Did you ever see a child suffering from croup? If you have, you appreciate the distress and real alarm that are caused by this affliction.

Dr. Copeland

Croup is a catarrhal inflammation of the larynx or windpipe. I am glad to say that it is much less frequently encountered than it used to be.

It usually attacks children between the ages of two and five. Some children are more susceptible to it than others.

The disease is commonly associated with adenoids and enlarged tonsils. It often follows exposure to cold and dampness. It may be associated with indigestion.

The attack comes on suddenly, but is usually preceded by several hours of hoarseness and nasal discharge. During the night the child has a barking cough.

The cough increases in severity and the breathing becomes difficult. In mild cases the labored breathing is not sufficient to awaken the child. In a more severe attack the child awakens, cries and complains of great difficulty in breathing.

The agitated appearance of the child frightens and terrifies the mother. The mother fears that the child will choke and in her anxiety rushes about frantically. Unfortunately, excitement increases the spasms and makes breathing more difficult for the child.

The first thing to do is to send for a doctor. While waiting for the doctor to arrive, there is much that can be done to give relief to the little sufferer.

Place the child in a hot bath. To make sure it is not too hot, test the temperature of the water with your elbow before you place the child in the tub. Keep him in the hot water for 15 to 20 minutes.

With older children, sometimes relief follows a hot foot bath to which a teaspoon of mustard has been added. As they say, this "draws the blood from the head."

Vomiting relieves the spasms. This may be induced by the use of drugs, but medication for this purpose should not be given except under the doctor's supervision. Only he is in position to determine whether such medication is indicated.

I can think of no better form of treatment than the use of the old-fashioned "croup kettle." The child is placed in a closed tent, which can be made from bed sheets. Steam is passed into the tent. The spasms and difficulty in breathing are greatly relieved by this measure.

After the attack has subsided, it is important to prevent repetition. Neglect of childhood ailments, especially croup, invites complications.

The child should have plenty of fresh air and cold bathing. Cold sponging about the neck and chest is beneficial. Enlarged and diseased tonsils should be removed. Improve the general health of the child by careful supervision of the diet.

Answers to Health Queries

Mrs. A. D. G. Q.—My little daughter of 6 has a heart murmur caused by diseased tonsils. The latter have been removed. Do you think that the child will outgrow the heart condition? What measures are necessary in such cases?

A.—Children frequently outgrow such a disturbance. Good care, nourishing food, lots of sunshine, avoidance of undue excitement or exertion should all help her general condition.

Contract Bridge -:-

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

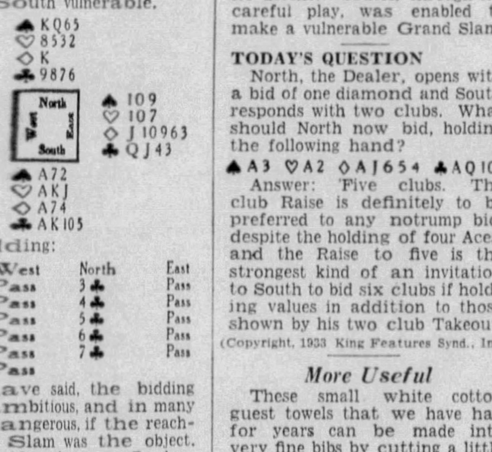
Bridge Abroad

With the continually increasing popularity of Contract Bridge around the world, the competitive spirit of players in other countries has naturally been awakened. Tournaments in which players compete against players have long been a feature of Bridge life in America. Now they are reaching around the globe. International matches and national tournaments in Duplicate are being played almost daily in countries where the Duplicate board was entirely unknown a few months ago.

Naturally, the principles of scientific bidding have not been developed to the same extent where the game is new and where theories of bidding and play are less known. However, in the main, the bidding is not at all bad, and the play is frequently of a very high order, as, for instance, in the hand below, played by Mr. C. T. Booy, of Batavia, Dutch East Indies.

This hand was characterized by rather doubtful bidding, but the eventual Grand Slam contract which was reached was extremely well played.

South—Dealer.
North-South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2♣	Pass	3♣	Pass
3◇	Pass	4♣	Pass
4♡	Pass	5♣	Pass
5♠	Pass	6♣	Pass
6NT	Pass	7♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

As I have said, the bidding was overambitious, and in many respects dangerous, if the reaching of a Slam was the object. However, the play was flawless. After the eventual bid of seven clubs, East seemed to be considering a Double, and his delay in determining to pass perhaps furnished the clue to the correct play of the hand.

West opened the deuce of diamonds. The singleton King was played from Dummy, upon which East played the Knave. South could see that his contract was, at best, an extremely doubtful one, but remembering East's hesitation before his final pass, he led the 9 of clubs, upon which East played a small one, and the card was successfully finessed. It was a case of a desperate situation requiring a desperate remedy. The trump suit was continued, East playing the Knave, and South winning with the King. West dropped a small heart. A small diamond was now ruffed in Dummy, and East's remaining trumps taken out, upon which West discarded the 8 and Queen of diamonds. South now led a small spade, which was won with Dummy's Queen. West playing the 3 and East the Ten. South now had a number of valuable clues to the distribution of the opponents' cards. The Opening lead justified the expectation that, unless the 2 had been a false card, West originally held four diamonds to the Queen.

This was corroborated by West's discards. Why, then, had West dropped the Queen of diamonds on the fourth round of trumps? Probably because he sought to guard hearts and spades. Apparently West held three four-card suits. South reasoned that if this were the case, a dangerous finesse in hearts would not be necessary. He laid the groundwork for the successful end-play of the hand by cashing the Ace and King of hearts. The Queen did not fall, so at his tenth turn to play, he led the Ace of diamonds, hoping to squeeze West. The last four cards in each hand were:

It will be noted that West had no defense. South, through his careful play, was enabled to make a vulnerable Grand Slam.

TODAY'S QUESTION

North, the Dealer, opens with a bid of one diamond and South responds with two clubs. What should North now bid, holding the following hand?

♠ A 3 ♡ A 2 ◇ A J 6 5 4 ♣ A Q 10 7

Answer: Five clubs. The club Raise is definitely to be preferred to any notrump bid, despite the holding of four Aces, and the Raise to five is the strongest kind of an invitation to South to bid six clubs if holding values in addition to those shown by his two club Takeout.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Informal Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I am going to have an informal evening wedding at home and just a few of the close relatives will attend. Would it be correct to call these relatives on the telephone instead of writing invitations?

2—I would like to wear an informal velvet dress. What color would you suggest? R.

1—An invitation-by-telephone never carries with it the grace and charm of the invitation-by-note. And especially is this true when the invitation is such an important kind as an invitation to a wedding, however simple the wedding is to be.

2—The color of velvet you choose depends on two things: First, naturally, the shade most becoming to you; and second, the uses to which you are to put the dress after your wedding. If you can indulge in the glorious pastel shades of velvet so superb this season, have the joy of wearing one of these. Such delicate shades of blue there are, such delicate shades of pink, such lustrous shades of green and yellow. If these light shades are too pastely, too luxurious for the post-wedding uses of the frock, then you have, too, the darker shades of all of these colors.

Introduction

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it improper to introduce young people to older people by their given names?

Was it entirely incorrect for me to introduce a young man to my parents by his first name considering that I had known him quite well previously?

My parents strenuously objected to my doing this and insisted that it was a breach of etiquet.

Both the young man and I are in our late teens. P.

What a thorough joy it is to hear of parents who have the excellent taste of insisting on having formal details done in a formal manner. Introductions are important things, and we recognize their importance by abiding by the formality that is appropriate and consistent with it.

So it would be quite all right for you to use the first name in your introduction of this young gentleman to your parents, provided also that you use the title before his name. Like this: "Mother, may I present Mr. George Lawton," or "Mother, this is Mr. George Lawton."

BUCS UNDECIDED ON ST. LOUIS TEST

WHETHER OR NOT the Pittsburgh club will consent to take part in any of the contests still is a question, and the Pirate officials are going to deliberate a long time before giving an answer to it, but it is a certainty that night baseball will be tried in the major leagues this year for the first time, with the owners of the Cardinals as the sponsors, at Sportsmans Park in St. Louis. At least one other club, Boston, already has consented to join in the experiment, and Sam Breadon, Cardinal president, is going right ahead with his plan to stage seven National League championship games under artificial lights.

Sam Breadon

League Chief John A. Heydler and others high in the sport predicted that night ball never would break into the majors. Baseball and sunlight were inseparable, they said. Such a highly scientific game could not be played with artificial illumination. Even now they say the nocturnal stuff cannot become a fixture. But just the same they voted to grant Breadon's request that the Cards be allowed to play night games at home if he could induce any of the other clubs to consent. He has Boston in line for at least one game and some others are expected to follow.

BREADON PRESENTED SOME figures that made the magnates sit up at a time when they were ready to listen to anything that might help business. He had no thought of night ball as a steady thing, but showed that occasional single night games at his Columbus farm had drawn larger crowds than Sunday double-headers.

The St. Louis mogul predicted that an occasional night game at his park would draw 10,000 persons against the 2,000 or less that might be expected to attend an average afternoon attraction. When he showed the courage of his convictions by saying he was willing to risk the expenditure of $25,000 for a lighting system to prove his contention, he was given permission to go ahead.

IT IS BREADON'S plan to play seven official National League games at night in St. Louis, one with each of the seven other clubs if all can be induced to play. An invitation will be sent to each to co-operate in the experiment.

Only Boston has replied so far. The Braves have agreed to play one game under the Mazdas, and they may play more if it is successful and when they learn what it's all about, being willing to take the night dates that may be declined by some of the other clubs.

JUST HOW MANY of the others will consent to take a hand in the experiment is problematical. Some of them have flatly announced that they will not play night championship games under any conditions. Others, though not committing themselves definitely, are at least mildly interested. They may be governed by the course of the majority. President Benswanger says the Pittsburgh club has not reached a decision on the point and will withhold its verdict for some time. But it is evident that most of the magnates are eager to see how the thing will work out, and are inclined to give it a trial, though scoffing at any suggestion that the system might ever become general in the majors.

Packey McFarland

Packey kidded his opponent

ONE OF THE first to congratulate Packey McFarland on his appointment to the Illinois Boxing Commission was Red Mason, former local manager and promoter. The two have been friends for a quarter of a century.

Almost 21 years ago, or on May 9, 1912, Mason seconded McFarland in a bout at Fall River, Mass., against a boxer known as Johnny Connolly, the Scotch champion. Connolly walked out of the ring.

THREE NIGHTS BEFORE that bout, or on May 6, Red Robinson, now a local referee and then under the management of Mason, met McFarland for 10 rounds, no decision, in Rochester, N. Y. Robinson was the only Pittsburgh boxer ever to fight Packey.

In McFarland's only Pittsburgh appearance, apart from engagements at the old Academy, his opponent was Bert Keyes, of Philadelphia. They went six rounds, no decision, at the Labor Temple on February 6, 1911, at a show promoted by the late Billy Corcoran. McFarland is now 44. He quit the ring in 1915 after a 10-round bout with Mike Gibbons in New York.

THE FOLLOWING WAS received from Robert J. Watson, of Natchez street: "For some time I have read your column. I think it is the best sports column in any newspaper I have ever read, from Chicago to New York and from Toronto to Kansas City in 38 years. Recently I read that Walter Steffen and Walter Eckersall had played on the same high school football team in Chicago. The facts are that Steffen played for North Division High and Eckersall for Hyde Park High a year or more earlier.

"I HAVE ALWAYS maintained that the greatest two distance punters of all time were: First, Pat O'Dea, of Wisconsin, in the late '90's, and, second, Walter Hershberger, of Chicago, about the same time, both of whom were known to kick as far as 90 yards. Will you agree with me on these two?

"I notice that the University of Michigan has been in the sports limelight during the last few months. It seems to me the Wolverines have been pretty good in all branches of college sports for 30 years. Will you please name the various sports in which they have been champions during that time?"

THE QUERY AS to Michigan leaderships in the several branches of athletics draws attention to a record for all-around sports achievements that is one of the most remarkable standouts in the history of intercollegiate competition.

The Ann Arbor university started winning championships half a century ago. In the meantime, with Fielding H. Yost as the most prominent and enduring figure as football coach and later as athletic director, the school has won no fewer than 49 Western Conference titles and tied for 10 others. It won four and tied for eight in football, won one and tied for two in basketball, won 14 in outdoor track, five in indoor track, 10 in baseball, five in swimming, three in hockey, three in tennis, two in wrestling, one in golf and one in cross-country.

Fielding H. Yost

MICHIGAN'S FOOTBALL CHAMPIONSHIPS were won in 1898, 1902, 1925 and 1932. There were ties with Wisconsin in 1901, with Minnesota in 1903-04, with Iowa in 1922, with Illinois in 1923, with Northwestern in 1926 and 1930, and with Northwestern and Purdue in 1931. In baseball the Wolverines took the Conference honors in 1882, 1899, 1918-19-20-23-24-26-28-29. In outdoor track, the title was taken in 1898-1900-01-02-03-04-06-18-19-23-25-26-30-32, and in indoor track in 1918-19-23-25-31. Swimming championships were captured in 1927-28-29-31-32; basketball in 1927, tying with Indiana, Purdue and Iowa in 1926 and with Wisconsin in 1929; tennis in 1897, 1925-30; hockey in 1925-30-31; wrestling in 1929-30; cross-country in 1922, and golf in 1932.

The district college basketball campaign is pretty close to the halfway post and we'uns are little, if any, better off right now than we were at the inception of the campaign when it comes to naming probably campions.

Anyone who thinks the Dukes have the city championship in the bag have another guess or two a'coming, so the boys at Pitt will tell you, and both Grove City and Westminster, to say nothing of Waynesburg (the real threat of the list) intend to furnish Geneva's claims to the laurel wreath with strenuous opposition.

There are, of course, several teams which may be counted out. Among those is West Virginia and it is difficult to see how Max Hannum will be able to pilot his Tartans to a position very high in the race. The Techs are all even so far, having won three and lost as many, but the three they've dropped were to championship contenders, Pitt, Duquesne and Geneva.

W. VA. WEAK

West Virginia put up a miserable showing here Saturday night against Pitt and as a matter of fact the play of the Panthers was nothing over which to bake a cake or declare a holiday. The West Virginia zone defense, usually a tough one, must have been left back in Art Smith's locker in Morgantown, where the Pitt boxers wish the Mountaineer fighters had left their left hands and punches.

It looks very much as though Tech would wind up the week one down to even figures as the Skibos have a very difficult assignment on their hands Wednesday night as they tackle Notre Dame at South Bend. If Tech can beat the Irish, they'll make up a lot of prestige lost by the defeats at the hands of Geneva, Pitt and Duquesne. The chances are they will take somewhat of a shellaching from the Ramblers.

Pitt goes away this week for a pair of contests, both of which the Panthers figure to win. Friday they'll be in New York for a game with Fordham and on Saturday, have the Army at West Point.

Big Joe Stydahar failed to add to any regrets that may lurk in Pitt bosoms over his switch of 1931 from Pitt to West Virginia, as he performed against the Panthers Saturday night. He may still develope into a star, but he has plenty to learn. Claire Cribbs has faced tougher centers than Joe. The big fellow, and he is all of that, scored seven points, but at no time was much trouble to Cribbs.

DUKES FACE TESTS

Those Dukes, who are coming along at an astonishing pace since their early season defeat at the hands of Westminster, have the toughest assignment of the week. Wednesday they must face Geneva and on Saturday, have their return date with Westminster to fill. The Dukes get a break in that the Geneva game has been transferred to Pittsburgh, but maybe it isn't such a good break at that, for the Dukes are notorious for falling down in home games, while

Battle of Fans Puts Stop to Court Game

DAYBROOK, W. Va., Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Mountaineers, swinging dim-lighted lanterns, trooped across the hills to Daybrook Saturday night to see a basketball game—a game that wasn't finished.

Fascinated by the fast moving cage players and the swish of the ball through the net, the men from the mountains let their adherence for their favorites develop into a belligerency that disrupted the contest between Daybrook and Hundred High schools.

The trouble occurred in the second half. Hundred was leading 12 to 10 when a broad-shouldered spectator challenged "anyone in the house." Another accepted the call of combat, and they slugged vigorously on the sidelines. The game went on, but other partisans soon got into the battle. Stripped to their undershirts, they fought. Blood spattered the floor and women screamed for the exits.

The referee, seeing no prospect of restoring peace, called the game in the third period, with Hundred leading 34 to 11.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF LAST SATURDAY: THE UNFORGETTING PIANIST—James Veazey, of New Albany, Ind., who is 29 years old, lost his eyesight in infancy. He took to picking out tunes on the piano at the age of 3, growing into a skilled master of the instrument. The most unusual thing about this sightless pianist is his uncanny memory, in which respect he resembles Blind Tom, the sightless musician of 50 years ago. Veazey now plays anything from a folding organ to the largest pipe organ in Louisville. He needs to hear a musical selection only once in order to fix it in his memory for ever after. He never forgets, and his repertoire includes more than 700 selections, in addition to the Standard Hymnal in its entirety.

PIRATE PREXY TO SPEAK

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Pirate President Bill Benswanger will regale Butler baseball lovers with "inside stuff" when he takes the floor tonight at the sports banquet scheduled for the up-state town. Manager George Gibson intended to take an active part in the winter baseball doings of the neighboring city, but the pilot is suffering from a severe cold and probably will not get to Pittsburgh before tomorrow.

Benswanger is all set for some lively times. The head of the Forbes Field outfit has made arrangements to accompany his club when it leaves for the Paso Robles training camp. The first squad is due to leave Pittsburgh two weeks from next Sunday.

When Gibson arrives this week he will find a number of items to claim his attention. It is likely that Gibby will take a personal part in the matter of Tony Piet's contract. The second sacker has not yet signed, but it is believed that the friendly differences between the player and his employers will be ironed out when Benswanger, Gibson and Tony get together.

Most of the Pirates have signed their contracts. Whatever dissenters there be do not seem to worry the club officials. It would not be surprising to find the fold complete before the advance party hits the camp trail.

The home moguls have arranged to work with the Crookston, Minn., in the event the proposed Northern League is able to carry out their baseball plans. Lute Boone, of Hazelwood, former star of the St. Paul Club, has just about closed with the Crookston people concerning the managerial job. Boone is eager to get several of the young Buccos and he is likely to be accommodated.

GRID GAME POSTPONED

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—A steady rainfall that made Wrigley Field unplayable yesterday caused the postponement until next Saturday afternoon of the football game scheduled between the Green Bay Packers, of the National Professional League, and a picked team led by Ernie Pinckert, former University of California star.

BELL, MANGIN NET CHAMPS

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Sensational serving and equally thrilling net play carried Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., and Berkeley Bell, of New York, to the doubles championship of the all-South tennis tournament here.

They defeated George M. Lott, of Chicago, the tournament singles champion, and Jimmy Van Alen, of Palm Beach, in straight sets yesterday, 6-1, 6-2, 6-3.

Mangin several times whizzed over service aces, while Bell stood at the net and smashed back the best returns of the opponents.

Lott and Van Alen advanced to the finals by defeating Clifford Sutter, of New Orleans, and Dr. Gene McCauliff, of New York, in a delayed semi-final, 4-6, 6-4, 6-1, 4-6, 8-6.

Darkness ended the match after the third set Saturday and Lott had to carry most of the burden yesterday to win in a hard-fought fifth set, after dropping the fourth to Sutter's dazzling backcourts play.

YALE ADVANCES RACE DATE

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 30.—(AP.)—The date of the Yale-Harvard crew race on the Thames River has been advanced from June 23 to June 16 as an economy measure, the Yale Athletic Association has announced.

The change moves the day of the race to the Friday before commencement, the first time in recent rowing history this event, usually the dramatic climax of commencement week, has been so scheduled. As a further economy move, the combination crew race, normally held the day before the varsity contest, has been canceled.

The changes will materially shorten the training period during which the Eli oarsmen are quartered at Gales Ferry, and will reduce the number of men to be taken care of there.

The Eli crews will report at their training quarters June 4, and will have only 12 training days before the race. In the past they have had nearly three weeks to work out on the Thames River course.

Westminster Drops Track and Tennis

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., Jan. 30—Varsity track and tennis have been suspended for this spring at Westminster College, Attorney James A. Stranahan, president of the athletic council, announces. The two sports will, in all probability, be taken up next year or the year following. The step was necessary in order that the budget be balanced for the year.

Both track and tennis will be run this year on an intra-mural basis. Suitable awards to fraternity and class teams will be made in each sport, and individual trophies may also be given to the outstanding performer of each sport.

An inter-fraternity relay and an inter-class relay will feature the track activities.

They're going to put on a barney at Motor Square Garden tonight.

No, not what you think—this Barney begins with a capital B. He goes by the name of Barney Ross, and he's said to be the sweetest prospect in the lightweight class. He hails from Chicago, where they tout him as the next lightweight champion of the world.

Barney Ross

We'll be able to tell a little better about him after we see Johnny Datto, local Filipino puncher, bend over a few right hand shots on his chin in the windup tonight. If Barney lives under them and doesn't lose his class he'll do.

TO BOX CANZONERI

So far, Ross, a good-looking Jewish lad, has taken some important hurdles and he is virtually matched to box Tony Canzoneri for the world title in Chicago. On his record, he figures to add Datto to his list of victims, but Johnny always is dangerous and has a chance with any of them. Datto is wicked at any stage of a bout. He may be trailing by a mile, but he never loses his ability to punch. And he hits almost as well with his left fist as he does with his right. Anyone who enters a ring with him is playing with dynamite. His fights always are interesting and colorful, for he is a showman packing a threat of sudden death. He personifies drama in the ring.

Mose Butch, local bantamweight, who tried to quit being a southpaw in his most recent start against Ross Fields, another wrongsider, at the Arena, and found it no go, will go to the post against Tony Palazzalo, of Detroit, in the eight-round semi-final. Whether or not he will try to box in orthodox fashion tonight has not yet been decided.

ZIVICS IN BOUTS

The Zivic brothers, Eddie and Pete, are in the two six-rounders, the former against Johnny Durso, of Oakland, in what promises to be a pip of a fight, and Fritzie against Georgie Schlee, of the North Side, a substitute for Bill Criggan, of Homestead, who has a bad eye.

In conformance with the new ruling of the Boxing Commission, the show will get under way promptly at 8:30 and there will be no intermission before the main bout.

Between Rounds

Bunny Buntach has added a new boxer to his stable in the person of Mike Barto, amateur lightweight, of New Kensington, who will make his professional debut shortly. Mike has had 46 bouts, of which he has won 26 by knockouts. He is a terrific body puncher.

Al Quaill and George Julius, local boxers, and Buck Makrum and Steve Stefek, of Uniontown, will represent Pittsburgh in an intercity tournament in Madison Square Garden, New York, tonight.

Joe Ruggizzoni, Detroit middleweight, who opposes Frankie Goosby in the main bout of the intercity show at the Moose Temple, Wednesday night, was born in Italy and has done much of his campaigning in Europe and South America.

Jackie Wilson is putting in extra training licks for the biggest opportunity of his career to date, his 10-round nontitle bout with Midget Wolgast, the flyweight champion, headlining the card at the Arena, on the North Side, Friday night.

Willie Davies boxes Georgie Annarino, of Zanesville, O., tonight.

Georgie Schlee and Johnny Hazel box the four-round opener at the Moose, Wednesday night, paving the way for four eight-rounders.

PEARSON-WRIGHT WIN

BOSTON, Jan. 30.—(INS.)—Stanley G. Pearson and William C. Wright, both of Philadelphia, today were national doubles racquet champions. At the Tennis and Racquet Club yesterday they dethroned W. Palmer Dixon and Herbert N. Rawlins, Jr., both of New York, 10-15, 15-10, 9-15, 15-8, 15-7.

The Moon Run Soccer Club defeated Valley Camp, 2 to 1, at South Park yesterday afternoon in the National Amateur Cup replay, with 2,000 fans watching one of the roughest games to be staged here this season.

Referee Jack Thomas had plenty of trouble on his hands right from the kickoff. The banishing of Capt. Harry Sickles, of Valley Camp, for disorderly conduct and the injury to Yates, Valley Camp fullback, put a crimp into any chance that the upriver club had of winning.

The first half was unproductive as far as goal getting was concerned. Foul after foul on the part of Valley Camp spoiled the action.

KNASE SCORES FIRST

In the second half, Knase scored for Moon Run. He was replaced later by Grecco, who scored the second goal, while Beadling, who had replaced Yates for Valley Camp, scored for his team.

The game was undoubtedly the worst of the season. The banishment of Sickles should have come earlier in the game. At the conclusion of the contest the Moon Run players all were badly battered and bruised. The lineup:

Moon Run—2		Valley Camp—1
Ambrose	G.	Davis
March	R.B.	Bates
Riddle	L.B.	Yates
Van Jura	R.H.	Begone
Pavlick	C.H.	Sickles
Kaschman	L.H.	Chilogni
Dolinar	O.R.	McGinn
Knase	I.R.	Harrison
Lloyd	C.	Chilogni
Stella	I.L.	Trusso
Cantwell	O.L.	Lorenzi

Substitutes—Beadling for Yates, Grecco for Knase.
Goals—Knase, Grecco, Beadling.
Referee—Thomas.

In the West Penn open competition first round games, Heidelberg defeated Barsotti, 3-0, at Heidelberg; Springdale nosed out German Sport, 1-0, at Springdale; Primrose found little difficulty stopping Shannon Powers, 4-0, and the De Marco Club, of Cuddy, nosed out Coverdale, 1-0.

McKNIGHTS WIN

AKRON, O., Jan. 30.—The McKnights Soccer Club, of Pittsburgh, displaying a wonderful brand of aggressive soccer, defeated the Akron Goodyears, 3 to 1, in the fourth round of the National Amateur cup competition here yesterday.

The Pittsburghers had the locals playing defensive soccer throughout. Kuten scored the first goal for the McKnights soon after the start, and just before half time, J. Kevish added the second.

In the second half, S. Kevish replaced Roney at inside right for the McKnights and scored the third goal, while Craig netted the lone marker for the home boys. The lineup:

Akron Goodyear—1		McKnights—3
Chatterfield	G.	Young
Clough	R.B.	Kuten
Zenish	L.B.	Bobish
Cosby	R.H.	Reavasz

A. A. U. NAMES COMMITTEES

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—After completing one of his biggest annual jobs, that of naming the members of 34 committees which will have supervision over the various sports ruled by the Amateur Athletic Union for the coming year, Avery Brundage, of Chicago, A. A. U. president, today announced the names of the committee chairmen through the union's national headquarters here.

Brundage will head two important committees, the executive committee and the foreign relations body. In all, more than 600 men and women were chosen as committee members.

The list of chairmen follows:

Star Pro Quintets Clash Here Feb. 9

Two of the most accomplished and renowned quintets in professional basketball will be opposed at Motor Square Garden on Thursday, February 9, when the Cleveland Rosenblum-Celtics will meet the Paterson (N. J.) five of the Metropolitan and Eastern leagues.

The game was arranged by J. J. Freund, Jr., local floor leader, as the first of a series of professional basketball attractions he proposes to offer here.

SHAMROCKS WIN

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Jan. 30.—(AP.)—The Shamrocks of Ottawa, Canada, yesterday made a clean sweep of the hockey series here by taking the final game from the Lake Placid Athletic Club by a score of 6 to 5. The Shamrocks won Saturday night's game, 7 to 3.

LOCAL HANDBALL PLAY OPENS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Two dozen aspiring performers square off this afternoon in the inaugural round of the Allegheny Mountain Association, A. A. U., novice handball tournament on the courts of the Keystone Athletic Club. With six leading local sport organizations represented in the competition, no inconsiderable amount of clever and spirited play safely may be predicted between now and the conclusion of festivities at the end of the current week.

First bracket action will be completed today with a round a day comprising the schedule thereafter. The tourney originally was carded for January 16, but the postponement was decreed to allow additional time for alignment of contestants. Activity this week will be confined to singles, with doubles event billed to begin next Monday.

Novices, under adopted definition, include all players who have never been returned winner of an accredited tourney. The victor in the impending conclave thus will be ineligible to attempt to repeat his achievement.

Arizmendi, Miller Signed for Battle

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Formality of signatures to articles out of the way, Baby Arizmendi, the pride of Mexico, and Freddie Miller, Cincinnati southpaw, will have until February 21 to get in trim for their fight here in the Olympic Stadium.

That date, the day before the Jackie Fields-Young Corbett world championship welterweight bout, was agreed upon by Jack Doyle, promoter, and the contestants' managers.

Miller, the National Boxing Association featherweight champion, was guaranteed $5,000. Arizmendi will share in the profits on a sliding scale basis.

The featherweights will be required to come in at 126 pounds.

Ross to Battle Petrolle and Canzoneri

Barney Ross, Chicago lightweight star, here for his 10-round bout with Johnny Datto, local Filipino, at Motor Square Garden tonight, announced through his manager, Art Winch, that he is slated to box both Billy Petrolle and Champion Tony Canzoneri in bouts in the Chicago Stadium between now and the last of June.

Ross said:

"The Petrolle match is being sought by Matchmaker Nate Lewis for next month. The only hitch that remains is a question of weight. Petrolle insists upon coming in at 140 pounds, while I am holding out for 138. Ross has no difficulty 133-135 pounds.

"We can have the Canzoneri match almost any time we say the word, but I am holding off until the World Fair. By that time I hope to have a half dozen or so good bouts under Barney's belt and to have him ready. Canzoneri is a great champion and Ross is a great prospect. I am satisfied to nurse him along slowly and be sure he is right when he gets his big opportunity."

Hoppe Challenges Tourney Victor To Match

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Willie Hoppe, perennial champion at 18.1 balkline billiards, has challenged the winner of the world three-cushion championship tournament here, and all four players still in the running for the title have accepted.

Hoppe offered a side bet of $1,000 that he could defeat the title winner, and Welker Cochran, of San Francisco, himself a master of balkline; J. N. Bozeman, Jr., of Vallejo, Cal.; Augie Kieckhefer, of Chicago, and Johnny Layton, of Sedalia, Mo., felt so confident that each stated willingness to play Hoppe for a side wager of $5,000.

ALLEN REFUSES YANK TERMS

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Johnny Allen, young right-hander of the New York Yankees, can be added to the holdout list on the basis of reports received here today from Florida.

Allen and Vernon Gomez were the only players on the Yankee roster who were given increases, but both balked on the grounds that they thought heir work in 1932 entitled them to bigger salary boosts.

Gomez came to terms several days ago and the Yankees probably will be able to swing Allen into line with a minimum of trouble.

The Giants announced receipt of the signed contract of Catcher Gus Mancuso, who came to Bill Terry's club in an off-season trade with the St. Louis Cardinals.

39 ON DODGER SQUAD

The Brooklyn Dodgers today listed 39 players who have been ordered to the Miami camp for spring training. It includes 16 pitchers, four catchers, 12 infielders and seven outfielders.

Included in the list of infielders are three first basemen, the injured Del Bissonnette, who has applied for reinstatement after a year on the retired list; Bud Clancy, who played at first several weeks of last year, and the veteran Joe Judge, recently signed after his release by the Washington Senators.

Twenty-four games are listed on the exhibition itinerary, concluding with the annual series with the Yankees at Ebbets Field April 8 and 9 and a game with the Philadelphia Athletics April 10.

KENNEDY SIGNED

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Outbidding several clubs, the Oklahoma City Indians have signed Vernon Kennedy, right-handed pitcher, to a 1933 Texas League contract.

E. J. Humphries, secretary of the Indians, made a special trip to Mendon, Mo., to get Kennedy's signature on the contract. He formerly was with the Wichita and St. Joseph clubs of the Western League and the Pittsburgh Pirates.

THURSTON HOLDOUT

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—(INS.)—Hollis Thurston, right-handed pitcher, today was a Brooklyn holdout. Thurston said:

"I expected to receive a cut, but not an amputation. The 1933 Brooklyn offer is outrageous. It calls for a $3,250 cut."

He returned the contract unsigned. Thurston explained, and asked that he be released, sold or traded.

COLLEGE FLOOR RACE OPEN

on the road, they usually shine.

The Westminster contest will be played in the Beaver Falls High School gymnasium on Saturday, but will be Westminster's "home" attraction. The fray was shifted to Beaver Falls from New Wilmington so as to accommodate a greater crowd, which may not be forthcoming as Saturday night is not an exceptionally good night for college basketball out of the city.

The Intercollegiate Boxing Conference has decided to determine its team champion on the basis of meets won, instead of on the number of individual bouts. This announcement was forthcoming yesterday. It looks like the first idea of awarding the team title to the squad winning the most bouts was the best—but its their league—let 'em do as they please.

Carnegie Tech and West Virginia are tied for the lead.

Capt. Don Smith and Don McCamant, of Pitt, and Bob Smith, of Carnegie Tech, continue to set the pace among the district scorers. The Pitt captain had gathered himself together 73 points in 11 games. McCamant has 66 and the Tech Smith 62. Next in line comes Skip Hughes, of Pitt, with 58 and then Paul Birch, of the Dukes, with 54.

In the Intercollegiate Conference, McCamant and Bob Smith are tied for top honors with 37 points apiece. In the Tri-State Conference, Rab Currie, of Waynesburg, is showing the way with 48. The leaders follow:

Eastern Colleges To Keep Baseball

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—The Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League has challenged the economic situation by deciding to operate through the 1933 season. This decision was arrived at in a meeting yesterday at the Columbia University Club, attended by representatives from Yale, Princeton, Columbia, Cornell, Dartmouth and Pennsylvania.

The league not only decided to play its 1933 schedule but also adopted dates for the 1934 campaign, according to an announcement by Ellwood W. Kemp, Jr., secretary treasurer.

Cornell, which a month ago cancelled all sports schedules for the rest of the school year except its basketball program, remains a member of the league, and retains its league dates pending developments in the athletic situation at Ithaca.

GRID COACHES TO HOLD RULES DISCUSSION

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—The rules committee of the American Football Coaches' Association will meet at the New York Athletic Club next Saturday to discuss what changes, if any, need to be made in the playing code for 1933, Chairman Lou Little, of Columbia, announced today.

Leading coaches from various sections of the country and five outstanding prep and high school mentors will attend the meeting. The coaches, at that time, will give definite instructions to their delegates who will sit with the national football rules committee a week later. Little, Noble Kizer, of Purdue, and Howard Jones, of Southern California, will represent the coaches at the meeting of the national committee.

LOCALS INCLUDED

Among members of the general committee expected to attend Saturday's meeting, in addition to Little, are Bill Alexander, of Georgia Tech; Hartley (Hunk) Anderson, Notre Dame; Bernie Bierman, Minnesota; H. O. (Fritz) Crisler, Princeton; Gilmour Dobie, Cornell; Dick Hanley, Northwestern; Harry Kipke, Michigan; Noble Kizer, Purdue; Elmer Layden, Duquesne; Harry Mehre, Georgia; Tuss McLaughry, Brown; Paul Schissler, Oregon State; Harry Stuhldreher, Villanova; Dr. Jock Sutherland, Pittsburgh; Howard Jones, Southern California; Capt. L. M. (Biff) Jones, Louisiana State.

In addition, John F. (Chick) Meehan, Manhattan; Mal Stevens, Yale; Jim Crowley, new Fordham coach; Howard Cann, New York University, and Herb McCracken, Lafayette, have been invited. Glenn S. (Pop) Warner, new coach at Temple, has accepted an invitation to be present.

The high school and prep school members of the committee include James L. Marks, Kiski School; Clarence Shuite, Santa Barbara High School; Milton Souders, Exeter; John Varnedoe, Savannah (Ga.) High School, and C. E. Adams, Elgin (Ill.) High School.

POP IN PHILLY

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Glenn S. (Pop) Warner, new head coach of football at Temple University, arrived here yesterday from Palo Alto, Cal., after a day's stop in Pittsburgh.

The famous grid mentor, who is to be one of the guests of honor at the annual banquet of the Philadelphia Sports Writers' Association tomorrow night, held a short conference with Temple officials at which, it was said, football was not discussed.

Garden Sets Dates For Six-Day Grind

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—The dates for New York's fifty-fourth international six-day bicycle race were announced today as February 26 to March 4, in Madison Square Garden.

Heading the entry list are William (Torchy) Peden, of Vancouver, leading six-day rider last year, and Freddie Spencer, of Plainfield, N. J., who won the December race in the Garden. Pairings for the coming grind have not been announced, but it was said to be unlikely that Spencer and Peden would ride together.

Several newcomers from Europe are expected to ride.

MILLROSE A. A. MEET DRAWS TRACK STARS

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Headed by Gene Venzke, Pennsylvania's great freshman miler, the East's track stars who tuned up at Boston Saturday in various preliminary meets stand by to repel an invasion from the West Saturday in the annual Millrose A. A. games in Madison Square Garden.

With Venzke in the field, the big race of the meet, the Wanamaker mile, regains some of the color of a few years ago, when it was the "mile of the century" every time it was run. The Pottstown (Pa.) youngster, who holds the world indoor mile record of 4:10, faces a battle against Glenn Cunningham, of Kansas, National Collegiate A. A. champion, with a record of 4:11 1-10, and the first American finisher in the Olympic 1,500-meter run. They are expected to make most of the race.

VENZKE EASY VICTOR

Venzke did only 4:17 3-5 in winning the K. of C. mile at the Prout Memorial games at Boston Saturday, but he was not pressed much by Brendan Moynahan and Frank Crowley, who finished 30 and 60 yards behind respectively.

The winners of the other featured races at Boston, Bernie McCafferty, of Newark, in the Prout Memorial 600; George Bullwinkle, of New York, in the Chevrus 1,000; Joe McCluskey, of Fordham, in the two-mile, and Dick Bell, of Massachusetts Tech, in the sprint, also are slated to appear in the Millrose meet against powerful opposition.

WYKOFF TO RUN

In addition to a number of experienced indoor campaigners, Frank Wykoff, of Los Angeles, one of the greatest outdoor sprinters, will try the board floor for the first time and a flock of other newcomers to the eastern indoor circuit will appear.

The lineup for the East-West duels in the leading events of the meet appears to run about this way:

800-meter run—Bullwinkle against Ned Turner, Olympic star from Michigan.

1,000-meter run—Dan Dean, Pennsylvania, against Charles Hornbostel, Indiana, Olympic finalist at 800 meters.

3,000-meter run—McCluskey, national cross-country and steeplechase champion, against Henry Brocksmith, Indiana, Big Ten mile and two-mile champion.

50-meter hurdles—Sloane Wells, Boston, 1932 Millrose winner, against Jack Keller, Ohio State, national hurdles champion.

Pole vault—Keith Brown and Wirt Thompson, Yale, against John Wonsowicz, Ohio State.

High jump—George Spitz, New York, world indoor record holder, against Bert Nelson, Illinois A. C.

METCALFE OUT

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Ralph Metcalfe, Marquette University's Olympic sprint star, will not be able to accept an invitation to compete in the Millrose games in New York Saturday. The New York games conflict in date with a meet between Marquette and Notre Dame here, and Metcalfe chose to perform for his school.

LOCAL WOMAN PLAYS OHIOAN

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Jan. 30.—Mrs. L. G. Riley, of the Edgewood Country Club, Pittsburgh, is playing her first round match in the annual Miami-Biltmore women's golf championship here today. She is opposing Mrs. Ernest Hoggart, of Lorain, O., in the title 16.

Mrs. Riley qualified yesterday with a card of 53-50—103. Erratic putting caused the Pittsburgh woman to add several strokes to her score.

Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, tied for medal honors with Mrs. Estelle Drennan, of Tulsa, Okla., each finishing with 44-44—88. These two were the only players in the qualifying field to come in under 90. Ladies' par is 40-42—82.

A foot injury kept Mrs. H. B. Sterrett, of Hutchinson, Kan., the defending champion, out of the competition.

Mrs. Sam Wallace, of Saputka, Okla., shooting 43-48—91, was runner-up for medalist. The winner in match play, starting today, will be awarded a leg on the Grace Doherty trophy, a three-year competitive award.

Collisions Cause Yacht Race Disputes

HAVANA, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—The Western Long Island Sound yacht Gull was first across the finish line in the second race of the Cuba trophy competition of the international star class regatta here yesterday, but collision at the start with the Ace, another Western Long Island Sound entry, left her victory dubious.

The judging committee will meet to decide which, if either, of the two boats should be disqualified. The Havana fleet Jibaro, winner of the first Cuba cup race Friday, also was threatened with disqualification. Skippers of the eight entries met yesterday and tentatively held her crew culpable for two collisions she had during the race, but left definite decision up to the committee.

Glenshaw at Coraopolis Y.
Doc Gannons at Frank Ferris.
J. J. Hurleys at St. Michaels.
Lyceum Comets at Olympic Club.

Efforts to line up a really formidable collection of basketballers to meet the crack House of David passers here a week from next Saturday in an afternoon game are meeting with much success.

Promoter Johnny Freund to date has secured the services of Harry Brownlee, former Westminster College center star; Moon Klinzing, Whitey Lytell, Yans Wallace and Ken Loeffler and probably will have Timmy Lawry, star of last year's Pitt quintet, ready for duty with the All-Stars.

Wallace, Klinzing and Loeffler have been out of active participation for a year or so, but have forgotten none of their floor knowledge.

In tonight's independent tussles, the Rooneys take on the Wilmerding Y. M. H. A. team at Wilmerding; Glenshaw engages the Coraopolis Y, Doc Gannons face the Farris five, and Hurlets meet St. Michaels in leading engagements.

STARS IN TIE FOR CUE LEAD

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Four players today remained in the battle for the world three-cushion billiards championship, but after tonight's match between Johnny Layton, of Sedalia, Mo., and Auguie Kieckhefer, of Chicago, the defending titleholder, there will be only three.

The California duo, Welker Cochran, of San Francisco, and J. N. Bozeman, Jr., of Vallejo, went into the final week of the tournament tied for first place with five victories against one defeat. Tied for second were Layton and Kieckhefer, at four victories in six starts. The rest of the field of 10 were out of the championship picture, but were still shooting for such things as $100 prizes for the shortest game and the best high run. Layton led for both of these prizes, his best game being 35 innings, and his high run a cluster of 11. No matches were played yesterday.

Neither of the leaders were scheduled for action today, the afternoon schedule calling for a pair of matches between players of lower ranking. In the first engagement, Tiff Denton, of Kansas City, and Allen Hall, of Chicago, were matched. Following them were Clarence Jackson, of Detroit, and Frank Scoville, of Buffalo, N. Y.

Dempsey, Jacobs Arrive in Chicago

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—(INS.)—Jack Dempsey, in the roll of promoter, and Joe Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, arrived here today to go into the matter of staging the battle of the Maxes at Soldier Field as a part of A Century of Progress next June.

Dempsey and Jacobs will hold a series of conferences with representatives of George F. Getz and officials of the Century of Progress during the next few days. Foundations for a Schmeling-Baer bout are expected to be arranged for the Lake Front edifice, where Promoter Dempsey himself battled Gene Tunney in 1927.

Whittier Athlete Pentathlon Victor

LAKE ARROWHEAD, Cal., Jan. 30.—(AP.)—With a total of 4,349 points piled up in five events, Kerns Vaughn, of Whittier College, won the intercollegiate pentathlon of the seventh annual winter sports carnival staged by the Los Angeles Junior Chamber of Commerce.

BUFFALO GIRL, DETROITER ICE CHAMPS

OCONOMOWOC, Wis., Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Just four years ago, slender, dark-haired Kit Klein, of Buffalo, made up her mind to be a champion speed skater. Today she had realized her ambition, after her triumph in the national championship meet here yesterday.

She first attracted attention as a potential queen of the flying blades when, as a schoolgirl of 14, she raced all the boys skating on municipal ponds. She made such fine showings in these races against older and stronger boys that she was urged to learn the technique of speed skating and take the sport seriously.

HAS FINE RECORD

After her graduation from high school, four years ago, she got the championship fever, and from that point on nothing could stop her. Despite the fact she now had a stenographer's position, she managed to find time to improve her skating.

Last year she achieved national recognition by winning the Olympic 1,500-yard finals.

Melvin Johnson, o[illegible]t, and Miss Klein outraced the best of America's skating amateurs yesterday and won for themselves national championships.

Officially they will be known as men's and women's speed skating champions of the United States. They earned the titles after two days of racing on Fowler [illegible] in the annual meet of the [illegible] Skating Union of the United States. Johnson scored [illegible] and Miss Klein 7.

WEBSTER BLANKET

Charles Delphier, a De[illegible] teammate of Johnson, finished second in the men's division with 90 points and Rose Marie Brady, Detroit, was runner-up among the women with 63 points.

Jimmy Webster, St. Paul, defending men's champion, was shut out of the point column, although he performed creditably in the heats.

U. S. TRAILS NORWAY

OLSO, Norway, Jan. 30.—(INS.)—Norway led the United States in the international speed skating tournament today despite the brilliant victory of Eddie Schroeder, Chicago, in the 10,000-meter event yesterday.

Making the fast time of 18:01.8, the American beat Ivar Ballangrud, Norwegian champion, by almost six seconds. Valentine Bialis, of Lake Placid, N. Y., was third.

King Haakon personally congratulated the Chicagoan while a record crowd of 20,000 spectators cheered.

In the 1,500-meter event, Schroeder finished second to Hans Engnestangen, Norway.

After two days of competition Norway was leading the United States, 57 1/2 to 86 1/2. The cross-country method of scoring is used.

Outstanding Pros In [illegible]-Ball Event

MIA[illegible]n, 30.—(AP.)—Gene S[illegible]ish and American open champion, heads the list of 32 of the country's outstanding professional golfers who plan to play in the classic international four-ball team match tournament here February 19-22.

The purse, previously $5,000, was cut this year to $2,600, but the committee in charge confined its invitations to—and received acceptances from—leading golfers who have won every major title in the past several years.

Big Ed Dudley, of Augusta, Ga., co-winner of the 1932 four-ball, notified the committee he could not play this year because of pressing duties at his home club. His winning partner, however, Tommy Armour, of Detroit, will enter the event.

Crawford Defeats Gledhill in Final

MELBOURNE, Australia, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Jack Crawford today retained his Australian lawn tennis singles championship as he defeated Keith Gledhill, eighth ranking player of the United States, 2-6, 7-5, 6-3, 6-2, in the final.

Gledhill returned to the courts with Ellsworth Vines, Jr., with whom he holds the American doubles championship, to defeat Crawford and E. F. Moon, the Australian pair, in the final of that division of play, 6-4, 10-8, 6-2.

BUYER'S GUIDE AND BUSINESS REVIEW

METAL MARKET CONTINUES QUIET

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—All metals were quiet last week, but zinc quotations displayed further easiness in the continued absence of buying interest. Sympathetic influences for the decline were said to be reports of increased smelting operations and rumors that the international zinc cartel would disband. However, smelters are said to be converting old ore stocks into reserve supplies of metal, while new production is limited. The recent decline in galvanized sheets is being watched for its possible effect in improving demand for zinc.

On the other hand, tin was steadier, owing largely to advances at London and strength in sterling exchange. Partial declines occurred late in the week as domestic demand failed to broaden materially on the upturn. Some improvement in inquiries under the market were reported, but differences in buyers' and sellers' views checked business.

Demand for steel increased moderately from miscellaneous sources and, combined with sustained buying from automobile manufacturers, it was reflected by further gradual expansion in ingot production to an estimated 17 per cent of capacity. Pig iron was quiet and steady.

Copper remained dull and unchanged at 5 cents for electrolytic delivered in the Connecticut Valley. Both buyers and sellers appeared to be marking time, pending developments in other industries which would affect consumption of finished products. Foreign demand also tapered off after immediate needs were covered.

Lead held steady on a fair movement of metal from smelting to consuming hands. A large part of the demand, however, was said to represent withdrawal of metal against contracts previously placed rather than new business. Orders placed for February delivery are reported to be relatively small thus far.

Antimony was dull. Recent advances in asking prices owing to Chinese export restrictions have failed to attract buying. The Chinese New Year holidays accounted for further quietness.

McKeesport Tin Plate Boosts Operating Schedule

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

M'KEESPORT TIN PLATE Company today started full operations on a four-day-a-week schedule. This replaces the previous schedule of 50 per cent operations six days a week, which has been in effect since the beginning of the year.

According to officials, the new production schedule will account for an output of about 62½ per cent of a full week's capacity. No new workers will be employed.

The company operated at an average of 71 per cent of capacity during December. Demand for tin plate has been reduced to some extent by depression influences but the decline has been much smaller than in other types of steel. This has been due to the fact that a major share of the tin plate produced is used by the canning industry. Packs of fruits and vegetables last summer were the smallest in several years but the essential nature of the business prevented any sharp decline.

Price Cuts Offset By Large Economies

THE REDUCTION IN the price of tin plate of 50 cents a base box of 100 pounds, which has been made effective on shipments for this year, has been offset by reductions in the cost of pig tin and semi-finished steel as well as in operating economies in the plant. As a result of this the company's earnings will not be adversely affected in the present year.

Net profit for 1932, which will be made public in about a week, exceeded dividends of $4 a share. In the first half of the year net profit after charges, depreciation and taxes was $668,151 or $2.23 a share on the 300,000 shares of capital stock. This compared with net profit of $1,270,722 or $4.23 a share in the corresponding period of 1931.

Decline in Profit Relatively Small

WHILE EARNINGS have declined as a result of adverse general business circumstances, the results shown by the McKeesport Tin Plate Company during the depression have been far more satisfactory than those of other industrial organizations.

Earnings for 1932 which exceeded $4 a share compare with net profit of $1,952,029 or $6.51 a share in 1931 and with $2,503,897 or $8.35 a share in 1930 which was the best year since the company has been making its earnings public.

The organization has no funded debt or preferred stock outstanding. At the close of 1931 it was in a strong current position with current assets of $4,861,267 against current liabilities of only $687,533. Cash amounted to $1,989,989 or nearly three times all current liabilities.

Donahoe's Installs New Boiler Plant

Donahoe's, Inc., is installing a complete boiler plant equipped with Iron Fireman for the downtown store, Fifth avenue. The plant is designed by Dravo-Doyle Company to give maximum efficiency. Estimates by the engineering department indicate a possible saving of over $8,000 per year by use of Iron Fireman in this plant.

The installation comprises two 100-horsepower Pacific steel boilers. These boilers are of welded steel construction, made in two parts so that it is possible to install them without disturbing the building, as would have been necessary with other steel boilers.

FINAL N. Y. STOCK SALES, 1932

The following is a list of the final quotations in 1932 of stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange, to be used in making county personal property tax returns. The value of all shares of stock on January 1 must be listed in the tax return with the exception of stocks of National banks, Pennsylvania corporations and foreign corporations registered and liable to a capital stock tax in this state. If in doubt as to what stocks and bonds are taxable, inquire at room 119, Court House.

Another Seashore Bank Closes Doors

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Jan. 30.—(AP.)—The Atlantic City National Bank did not open for business today. At the close of business December 31 last the bank published total resources of $14,100,740.36.

It is the second banking house to close in the history of the city. The first occurred last week, when the Chelsea-Second National Bank and Trust Company, with two branches failed to open.

DARING NEEDED FOR REVIVAL OF U. S. TRADE

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—In the first month of the new year, business, in a sidewise movement, held its own at a low level, pausing for a clarification of the effect of political developments after March 4 on the economic situation.

As in December, the chief disappointment is in lines directly reflecting the meager purchasing power of consumers. Retail sales reports continue to mirror the effect on buying of wholesale unemployment in the cities and of continued impoverishment of farmers in the great rural areas. Accordingly, the insistent demand for effective unemployment relief and farm relief is closely connected with the current facts concerning business volume.

Mr. Rukeyser

ESCAPES FURTHER DECLINES

On the other hand, the primary industries resisted further declining tendencies. There was something of a slight spurt in non-residential building, as in carloadings and coal production. A moderate pick up in commercial loans was an encouraging portent.

With insignificant changes in the economic barometers, Wall street was more than usually sensitive to political developments, including the preparations for war debt conversations and also the rejection by Congress of the proposal to remonetize silver at the ratio of 16 to 1.

DARING NEEDED

The great need in business is to revive the spirit of venturesomeness and daring.

Arthur W. Kiddy, British financial analyst, writing in the Evening Post, says:

"As the result of talks with many who have returned to London from New York, I find the consensus to be that the chief feature of the prolonged crisis and distress in America is the psychological effect produced upon the minds and the spirits of American businessmen.

"Financial losses, the shaking of confidence and the difficulty of determining the true causes of the trouble seem, so it is alleged, to have crushed constructive views for the future, leaving the American people a prey to technocracy or any other theories."

In pointing to the remedy for this negative state of mind, an American executive, I. A. Hirschmann, of Lord & Taylor, New York, said:

"Today, of all times, when we need sound promotion, the tendency is to contract and to be inanely cautious—to think in terms of rows of figures and a piece of paper, instead of merchandise and customers.

"I'm all for watching pennies and eliminating waste. But at what point does the penny-pinching throttle initiative, frustrate the spirit of the merchandise man, a buyer, or adviser who is intent upon finding a new way of getting business? Nothing was ever done by not doing it. Columbus didn't get to America by not trying to get here. American business was not built by conservative advertising or not daring to do."

STOCK MARKET MOVEMENT NARROW

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—The stock market drifted on an almost even keel today.

The list remained extremely sluggish, but rails showed a little firmness as the session wore on, and a somewhat easy tendency noted elsewhere in the list was soon overcome. By early afternoon, most price changes were negligible, although some shares were up fractions to more than a point.

The formation of a Hitler cabinet in Germany temporarily depressed Reich bonds, and may have been a factor in the easy tone of the markets generally at the start, for the growth of the Nazi movement was regarded as alarming by financial quarters here a few years ago. But the attitude toward Hitler has changed considerably in the past year, and some international banking quarters now express the view that a German Chancellor with a large popular following should be considered constructive.

The approach of United States Steel's quarterly directors' meeting for dividend action, slated for tomorrow afternoon, against acted as a brake upon speculative impulses in the market, although Wall street now definitely understands that the regular preferred dividend will not be paid. Opinions differ as to whether a reduced distribution will be ordered. It is reliably understood that the fourth quarter deficit was at least as large as that of the third quarter.

The week-end steel trade reports indicated some further gains in ingot output, but current production must almost double before larger steel companies can show profits.

An influence in the recent firmness of the rail shares has been the expectation that the National Transportation Committee will soon submit its report. The report to the national committee of the joint committee of rail and highway users has also attracted considerable attention in railroad banking quarters, particularly the motor transport representatives agreement "in principle" to federal regulation of commercial highway traffic.

TOBACCO STOCK PLOT CHARGED

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 30.—(INS.)—George H. Hill, president of the American Tobacco Company, and his associates increased the common stock of their corporation, buying it at $25 a share while the market price was $112, it was charged in Chancery Court here today.

William J. Mathews and five other stockholders have brought suit against Hill and the directors, whom they charge with "conspiracy for their own enrichment."

The complaint charges that at a special meeting in June, 1930, the stockholders authorized the company officials to increase the stock, but that it was then "a fundamental duty on the part of the directors to obtain no profit for themselves in the transaction." Under cover of the plan, however, the directors, dominated by Hill, according to the charge, bought up over 30,000 shares at the low figure.

Mathews and his associates asked the officials to give an accounting before the court, pointing out that Hill's salary as president in 1930 was more than $1,000,000, with vice president and directors receiving more than $500,000 each.

Monetization Talk Lifts Silver Price

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Silver prices advanced about ¼ cent an ounce in the early trading today on buying said to have been influenced in part by the recommendation of Sir Robert Horne, former British chancellor of the exchequer, for increased monetary use of the white metal.

Spot silver rose ⅜ cent to 26⅜ cents, while futures on the National Metal Exchange rose from ¼ to 4-10 of a cent.

STOCK MARKET SHOWS IT HAS GONE STALE

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—The stock market has plainly gone stale.

The "long account" was largely formed in late December, and has been added to by "support" operators, such as occurred last Friday. On the other hand, a patient short interest holds on from the November and December rallies.

It seems, however, that most of the effort has been to put the market up. Therefore, the staleness is probably to be interpreted as bearish.

FEAR TO PERMIT DROP

A week ago, I wrote that the market should be let down, but that it might fiddle around, preliminary to a February push up. It now looks as if the sponsors are afraid to let stocks go down, while they are unable to put the market up because of no following.

On Friday, for example, the sponsors plainly had to jump in and make a "save." The market looked really bad at noon, and support buying was thrown in (support in Steel was advertised). Then, on Saturday, the thing went dead, with an unusually slow opening and no follow through.

On the bull side, probably the most effective point at the moment is the possibility of "constructive" news bearing on the railway situation. This might be a Roosevelt plan for comprehensive relief, or a report from the Baruch-Smith committee, or both.

Then there is the proposed legislation to facilitate bankruptcies, and proposals to broaden the lending of the R. F. C.

These things make the bears cautious. They do not, however, throw much light on where the railways are going to get traffic. They are the sort of thing which may produce a "rally," if not already discounted. But they are followed by "disappointment."

BOND MARKET

As to the irregular strength in the bond market, it rests largely on growing confidence that inflation is not likely. Therefore, to the extent that stocks have been marked up in anticipation of inflation, it is not bullish for stocks.

On the bear side we find, first, that the business news is not favorable, casting doubt on the "spring rise." Bank failures are most numerous, and "money in circulation" is increasing again. Earnings statements are mostly poor, industrial corporations averaging for 1932 about 50 per cent below 1931. This makes the price-earning ratios of several leading companies look very high.

The action of the market shows a number of unfavorable aspects, one being the relative weakness of the old leaders as a group, and another the continued number of specially weak spots (i. e.—Tobacco, Borden, Industrial Alcohol, Paramount and Steel.)

Broadly speaking, there has been a notable absence of volume during the attempt to rally the market. If the market has been trying to go up, this is more significant than the dullness on dips.

TECHNICAL WEAKNESS

Some weakness in the technical position is indicated by the last rise in brokers' loans, as it came during a week in which no progress on the up side was made in the market.

The stock market last week was one of those "trading shelves," held there, despite unfavorable current news, by hopes—hopes of inflation, of legislative plans and of a spring rise in business. I think it has lost some of its ability to respond to good news, and that not much more disappointing news would be needed to roll it off the shelf.

It is a ticklish affair, and the average trader has been getting whip-sawed. Better not listen to all those "tipping" letters you are getting.

STEEL OUTPUT UP SLIGHTLY

CLEVELAND, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Another jump of one point in steel production was noted by the magazine Steel today, but the orders of the Ford interests to hold up materials and parts were seen as factors which will slow up a movement that was becoming promising.

The magazine, in its weekly summary, said mill activity increased one point to 19 per cent of normal last week. This snapped production back almost to 20 per cent from a holiday low.

The report says:

"To snap back almost to 20 per cent in one month after the holiday low is obviously encouraging and is quietly generating confidence, but the iron and steel industry prefers to be overly cautious, to live from week to week, and to be steeled against a temporary interruption of the upward march.

"Unquestionably, despite the recent improvement, the market situation continues extremely spotty."

C. I. T. to Redeem Preferred Stock

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Commercial Investment Trust Company announced it will retire all outstanding 7 per cent first preferred and 6½ per cent preferred at $110 a share, plus the regular quarterly dividends payable as of April 1, 1933. The corporation also will retire 66,459 common shares held in its treasury.

Liverpool Wheat Market.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 30.—The market was due unchanged. Opened as due and at 1:20 p. m. was ⅛ to ¼ cents lower.

At 2.15 p. m. the market was unchanged to ⅛ pence lower.

The market was unchanged to ¼d lower at the finish.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—The bond market was the prey of special influences in both the domestic and foreign fields today and prices shifted about somewhat irregularly over a relatively narrow range.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows (000 omitted, in sales column; United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

MARY FAITH

Story of a Girl With Husband Who Wouldn't Grow Up

By BEATRICE BURTON

Mary Faith and Kim Reunite And Plan to Go Away For a New Start

CHAPTER XLIV.

Kim lay in a big carved walnut bed in a big high-ceilinged bedroom in Dr. Thatcher's house. His fingers were locked across the top of his broad chest, and his gray eyes, a bit sunken, but brilliant as always, went from Mary Faith, who sat beside his bed, to his mother, who stood at the foot of it.

Mrs. Dr. Thatcher, in a house dress made of elephant's-breath gray voile, was doing most of the talking.

"Doctor had Kimberly's chest X-rayed about six weeks ago—just a while before he came down with this pneumonia," she said solemnly and impressively. As Mrs. Dr. Thatcher she tried to be much more impressive than she had ever tried to be during the days of her widowhood and grass-widowhood. "And Doctor wasn't very happy about his health then. But now that he's been so ill he's downright uneasy about him, with the cold weather coming on and all, don't you know? He's just afraid of what might happen if Kimberley stayed here. He might develop into a regular invalid—or even worse things could happen."

Mary Faith's big frightened eyes widened.

"Doctor thinks—in fact, Doctor says that he's got to get right out of this climate right away," Kim's mother continued. "He thinks he'd better go to New Mexico or Arizona—one of those dry climates. A winter there will put him into fine shape, he says. He's sure of that. Only you see, Mary Faith, we just don't know how to manage it. Kimberly's not well enough to work, and we aren't rich enough to pay his bills out there and provide a nurse for him, too . . . and he'll have to have one for a little while. We thought perhaps you could find something to do out there—something to earn a little money.

She gazed at Mary Faith questioningly and then remarked, "I'd go with him, but I don't see how I can leave doctor for so many months. Ella said she'd go, but you know she hasn't any money . . . We can scrape together the railroad fare for two people, but that's all we can do, doctor and I."

"I'll let you two talk it over," she said, and closed the door very slowly as if she meant to make as little noise as possible. Kim raised his head a trifle and watched it swing shut, a frown between his eyes.

"She's taken awfully good care of me, but she makes me so doggone nervous!" he said irritably. "You know—she's all over the place at once. And she drops things and makes more noise than a mule on a tin roof."

"Kim, she's your mother and she loves the very air you breathe," said Mary Faith. "You shouldn't talk about her. She can't help making noise. She's a large person and she's not as young as she once was."

He moved his shoulders impatiently against the pillows. "Nobody loves the very air I breathe. Nobody but you," he said dryly. "You notice she's not going out West with me, don't you? She's staying right here with Doc. And you're elected for the job."

"You know how willing I am to take it, Kim. But how about you? How do you feel about going out West with me?"

"If I didn't feel all right about it do you suppose I'd have let them send for you today?"

He grinned up at her suddenly. His quick flashing grin that instantly made him look his reckless debonair self.

"You are still worrying about Claire Maldon?" he asked. "If you are you can cut it out. I haven't seen her for a couple of months. I haven't even thought of her—very often. They refused her a divorce here and she's gone out to Reno to try to get one there."

He got up on one elbow. "You know what I've been thinking of the last week while I've been lying here, Mary Faith?—Remember those snapshots that Jean Bartlett sent you? The pictures of those mountains out in Arizona with all the fields lying along the base of them—and the pepper trees and the acres and acres of vegetable gardens?—Well, I've been thinking it must be a pretty grand place to live in. I'm sick of soot and smoke and office buildings, Mary Faith. Maybe if we go out there I can get a job after a while, and we won't want to come back here—"

And then Mary Faith was on her knees beside him, with her arms tight around him and her tears warm against his cheek.

"Kim, I just knew you'd want me back again sometime—like this," she said huskily. "I told you six months ago that you would, didn't I? And you thought I was wrong, but I was right, wasn't I?"

"Sure, you've been right about everything, and I've been wrong. I've wondered a thousand times, lying here, how you could have taken me back so many times after I'd left you and stayed away from you for months at a crack. . . . Gosh, there's not another woman in the world who'd do it, Mary Faith."

"Oh, yes, there are. There are millions of women just like me, Kim." She pressed him down upon his pillows and smoothed his hair back from his forehead. "Don't you suppose there are other husbands who get tired of their wives every now and then, and tired of all their responsibilities? And don't you suppose their wives take them back? Of course, they do."

"Kim, I just knew you'd want me back," said Mary Faith.

She laughed a little shakily. "And you'll probably get sick and tired of me again, Kim. But it won't terrify me the way it used to. I'll just wait for you to come to your senses . . . I'll know that sooner or later everything will be all right again, just as it is now."

For her everything was all right then. Without any work in sight or any way of earning money, without any real plans for the future, with nothing but the promise of $200 railroad fare for herself and Kim and the baby, she still knew that everything would be all right. She would make things come right, somehow or other . . .

"Kim," she said, "I think I'll run downstairs and telephone a wire to Jean Bartlett to tell her that we're coming out to Phoenix. She's been wanting me to come out—and she'll probably be glad to take us in until we find a place of our own."

Mrs. Puckett, too. Mrs. Puckett would probably lend them some money and they would surely be able to pay it back after a while . . . Mary Faith felt power and hope stirring within her as she braced herself for the long struggle ahead.

She got up from the floor and walked across the room on her way downstairs to the telephone. At the door she turned for a minute and glanced back at Kim who lay watching her with a look of utter contentment on his face.

"'By faith the walls of Jericho fell down,' Kim," she said to him. "That was a long time ago—but it's still happening every day."

And she closed the door and went away while he wondered just what Mary Faith had meant by that.

THE END.)

"MOIST THROAT' STOPPED MY COUGHING SPELLS!"

"I'm certainly glad I learned about 'moist throat'!" writes Miss A. S., of New York City.

Your throat and bronchial tubes are lined with millions of pores like tiny "bottles" continually supplying moisture to the delicate tissues . . . until you "catch cold."

Then these pores clog. Phlegm collects. Dangerous germs find a breeding place. Tickling, irritation and coughing set in.

To cure your cough you must increase the flow of your throat's natural moisture, loosening the phlegm so it can be expelled. Many cough "remedies" contain numbing drugs which merely "deaden" the nerves . . . but don't get at the root of the trouble!

PERTUSSIN, a scientific remedy, is the extract of a famous herb which opens the tiny glands, stimulates the flow of throat moisture and brings quick relief naturally.

If your throat's raw or dry, take a few spoons of PERTUSSIN now. It's safe, even for children. At drug stores, 60¢.

"I want my husband to admire my skin"

A WIFE never forgets that a clear skin is irresistible and that some other woman might prove more attractive.

How can she have a clear skin, too?

There is one way which many have found efficient . . . by restoring deficient red-cells and hemo-glo-bin (skin and tissue purifier) to the blood.

The right amount of hemo-glo-bin in the blood makes a vast difference in the way you feel and look.

S.S.S. Tonic has the special property of increasing the red-cells and restoring deficient hemo-glo-bin to the blood.

Tens of thousands yearly take a course of S.S.S. to pep up a lagging appetite, regain old-time vigor, restore color to the skin and to build up resistance to infectious diseases, pimples and boils.

Try S.S.S. yourself. You will be happy with the beneficial results obtained. At all drug stores. The larger size is more economical. © The S.S.S. Co.

"I was Tired and Cross"

"I was so tired and cross with the children, I didn't want anyone to come around me. Every month I suffered terribly so that I couldn't do my work. After taking two bottles of your medicine I feel as I had been born again. I am strong and jolly and like to have company."

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

More than 400 boys and girls have joined the Cameraphone Chapter of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club in the past four weeks.

Just four weeks ago Manager George Bronson started a membership drive with prizes for the boy and girl who brought in the most new members. At a late hour Saturday night, Manager Bronson and his assistants were still tabulating the returns. The winners will be announced next Saturday.

MEET MEMBERS

After the new members had received their membership cards and buttons, they were all called to the stage and introduced to the other members. Then the club pledge was recited and all the members joined in singing "America."

Manager George Bronson then introduced Rocco Plaza who acted as master of ceremonies.

Then came the "Baby Parade," a little sketch with Phyllis Kirkpatrick, Betty Brooks and Geraldine Amen as the principal characters.

Following this act Rocco Plaza again entertained. This time he danced to the tune of "East Side, West Side." Then came the hit of the show.

GREETED BY 'PAL'

While the "kiddies" were entering the theater they were greeted by "Pal," the educated Belgium police dog. "Pal" was brought to the center of the stage and introduced once again to the members. His owner, Charles Wood, then told how "Pal" had received his training and proceeded to put him through his tricks. The stunts that this dog does held the "kiddies" in amazement for more than a half hour and when all the time allotted to him had been used up, the boys and girls clamored for more, but "the show must go on."

Kay Burke, that little girl with the big "blue" voice then sang several songs and at the finish all the members were singing with her. Rocco Plaza closed the vaudeville show with another of his famous clog dances.

Next Saturday Manager George Bronson will give away six live bunnies. Easter and bunny season is just around the corner, so boys and girls, if you would like to win a live bunny, be at the Cameraphone Theater next Saturday and compete in the games and contests which will be held.

Reducing the Stagnant Interim

No longer will the lame congressional gosling be allowed from November to March to hatch his duck eggs.

From now on he goes out with the new year like December's calendars.

That we formerly allowed the shorn lamb four months of grace was due to wind, weather and transportation. In the old days the legislators traveled on hossback and progress was as slow as the dinner bell when you're hungry.

The nation would mark time when the old gray mare threw a left hind shoe. You could do nothing until Martin arrived. And when Martin got there he didn't improve the betting.

The reason Jesse James could gallop all over the Middle West was because folks thought he had just been elected somewhere. And the quicker he got there the sooner his salary started.

The advent of the bicycle speeded production up a bit. But the motor car was the real reason for the change in the law. Combined with the railroad and the airplane we can reach Washington in a minute's notice. Provided the voice of the people is sweet and low and affirmative.

We understand that the walloped candidate for office relinquishes his grip on the first of January. That gives him almost two months to consolidate himself and demand a recount.

That's a lot of taxpayers' time. Why not make the festivities instantaneous? While one side is going out to the field let the other team step up to the bat. It would eliminate much lost motion. Politicians and statesmen operate better when they know their jobs are good for four straight years.

If you followed our ever-ready plan we would hold the elections on November fourth as usual. And on the fifth the successful statesmen would scramble into Washington by parachute, in franked laundry bags and by a series of flanking sorties across the long bridge.

Then presidental winters would not be all frost and deadlocks. There would be quick action. Just pack the trunk, shake hands with the neighbors, whistle to the Vice President and you're off to the political pasture to spend your old age in hoping for the best and brushing your high silk hat the wrong way.

Pulp paper magazine writers used to sell as many as 100,000 words a month at 3 cents a word; now they can't sell one story a month at one cent a word.

If the situation gets worse they'll have to send out their manuscripts attached to homing pigeons.

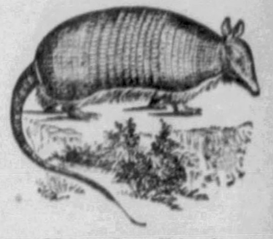
FRISBY BILL WILL PROTECT THE HOME



Man's Best Friend.

After months (yes, weeks) of research, Congressman Frisby has introduced House Bill No. 34320 appropriating $4,320,000 to protect the Three-Toed Armadillo, which Frisby says is a natural enemy of the red ant.

"Armadillos," says Frisby "abound in Central America. Hence they form a natural barrier against an invasion of ants from South America to North America. My bill merely appropriates funds to see that the armadillo is unmolested in its self-appointed and thankless task of protecting our homes against an invasion of ants which, if unchecked, would run mankind off the face of the earth in 150 years or more."

Introduction of the bill also answers for all time charges of Frisby's enemies that he is a tool of the Ant Paste trust.

Q. & A. DEPARTMENT

Dear Sympathetic Aunt Bella—

I am worried because I do not know how I am going to keep my husband at home nights after beer is legalized. Do you know of any wholesome substitute for beer making that will keep a man amused during the evening? Worried Wife.

Ans.—As far as I am can see, dearie, the best idea would be to lay in a supply of English walnuts. These can very readily be cracked with a beer-bottle capper.

A. ("Helping Hand") Bella.

Kline Should Resign

The Mayor Will Solve an Embarrassing Problem and Gain in Public Esteem If He Will Abdicate.

Nearly a week has elapsed since the Superior Court handed down its unanimous decision reversing Judge Thomas D. Finletter and holding that Mayor Charles H. Kline was properly convicted of malfeasance. The city has awaited word from Kline as to what he would do, but that word has not been forthcoming.

Pittsburgh occupies the embarrassing position of being under the administrative direction of a man found guilty of crime and awaiting sentence.

Kline should relieve the city of this embarrassment by at once resigning the mayoralty. By doing so he will solve an irritating problem and go a long way towards re-establishing himself in public esteem.

There is talk of proposing to him that sentence be suspended in return for his resigning without further court procedure. This is opposed in some quarters on the ground that he is as deserving of punishment as his former Director of Supplies, Bertram L. Succop, who was convicted with him, and who faces a term in jail.

It is not for private organizations or individuals to dicker in regard to Kline's sentence. Nor should his resignation be conditional on his receiving leniency.

The Mayor should resign unconditionally out of deference to the people of Pittsburgh and out of regard for the fitness of things.

He will be in a much better situation to ask for clemency if he does the decent, manly thing, and relieves Pittsburgh of a vexatious condition.

Indispensable Service

The Work of the Young Women's Christian Association Deserves Generous Support.

The Young Women's Christian Association, seeking $107,000 with which to carry on its work during the ensuing year, deserves liberal support.

The service that this organization renders is valuable at all times, but particularly so right now. Mrs. Albert P. Burchfield, general chairman of the campaign, rightly says:

"The work of the Y. W. C. A. is more important today than ever before in its history. As the principal agency dealing with girls and young women, it is looked to for an answer to the problems of the unemployed girl."

This indispensable work will suffer if the association fails to reach its goal. Pittsburgh must not fail.

City Police Shamed

The Raid on the Monoco Club Is an Indictment of Their Honesty and Competency.

The Monoco Club, a notorious speakeasy and gambling house, was raided Saturday morning by state police from Reading, who found plenty of evidence that the law was being violated.

The club is on Forbes street, opposite the Oakland Police Station, and recently was honored by the attendance of Senator James J. Coyne, who addressed a meeting there.

The exposure of this resort by the state police is an indictment of the honesty and capability of the city police.

Judge Frank P. Patterson, who instigated the raid, deserves thanks for this fresh evidence of his energy in attacking the predatory rackets.

Gains in Education

They Must Not Be Abandoned Under the Pretext of Reducing School Expenses.

The advance of public education in Pittsburgh is illustrated no more effectively than in the increase in the number of graduates from the city high schools.

In our parents' and grandparents' youth comparatively few boys and girls went to high school. The total number of graduates in the decade 1870-79 was only 635. Even in the first 10 years of the present century the total number of graduates from the Pittsburgh high schools was only 2,333. In the decade 1920-29 the total was 22,263, or almost 10 times as many as 20 years before. In the three years 1930, 1931 and 1932, there were graduated 10,190 pupils, or almost half as many as in the entire decade immediately preceding.

We are just beginning to "reach our stride" in popular education.

These gains must not be surrendered under the pretext of reducing school expenses.

Iron Imports Increase

Another Strong Reason for "Buying American" Is Given In Department of Commerce Report.

A report just issued by the Iron and Steel Division, Department of Commerce, provides another strong reason, particularly interesting to Pittsburgh, for "buying American."

Last year was a year of poor business, with exports and imports of many kinds showing a decrease from the year before.

But importations of pig iron into the United States increased. Foreign pig iron to the amount of 130,630 tons was sold in this country in 1932, as compared with 84,454 tons the year before.

No wonder many of our furnaces are idle.

No wonder James A. Farrell, former president of the United States Steel Corporation, told the House Ways and Means Committee that "cheapened currencies have placed the iron and steel business in a place where there is no effective tariff at all."

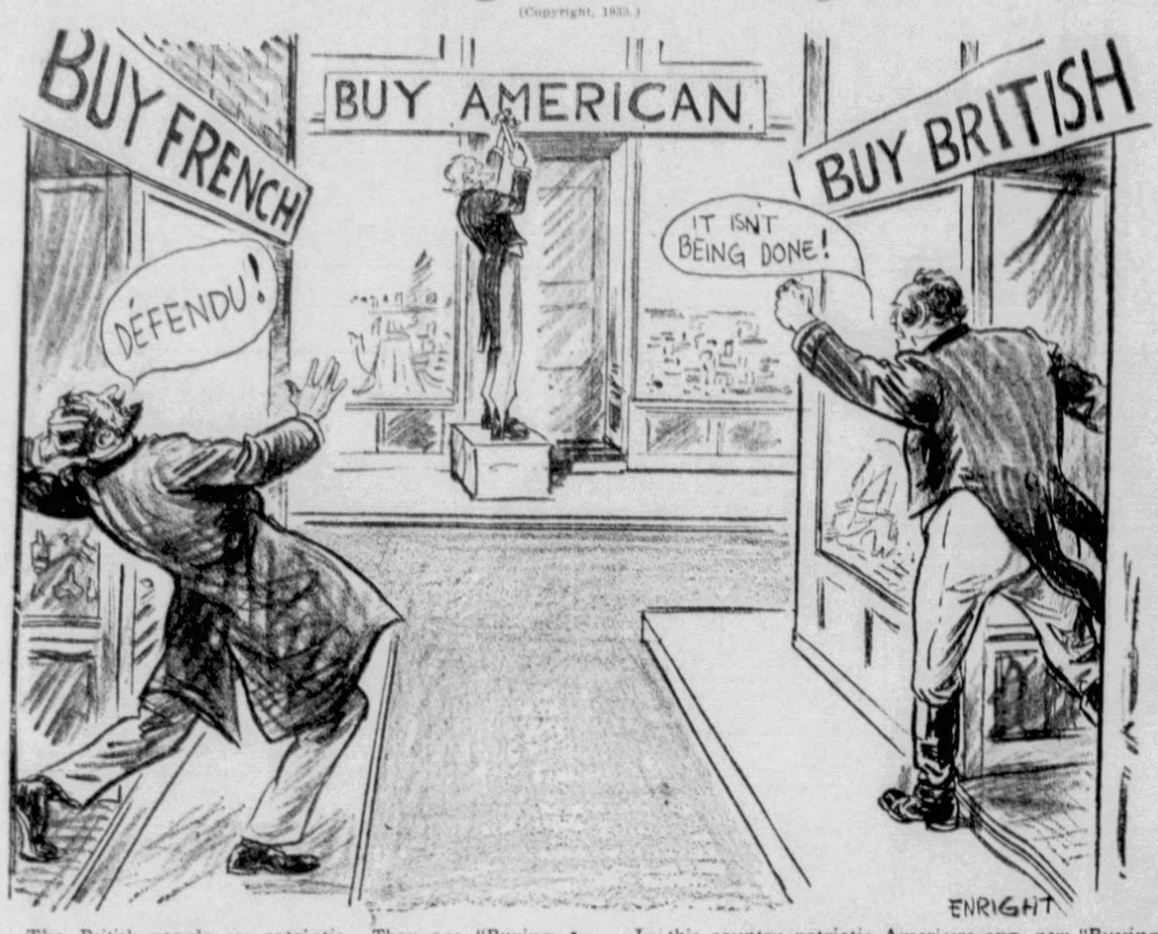
SUN-TELEGRAPH'S PLATFORM

For Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania

1—A better, cleaner, more beautiful city.
2—Rapid Transit.
3—Repeal or modification of "blue law."
4—Establishment of Pittsburgh metropolitan district.
5—Town Hall, seating at least 15,000.
6—Voting machines to insure honest elections.
7—Development of river transportation.
8—Development of air transportation.
9—Electrification o. railroads.
10—Fair public utility rates.

Following Their Example

(Copyright, 1933.)



The British people are patriotic. They are "Buying British" to help British industry and British labor.

The French are also a patriotic people. And in France they have a patriotic crusade—"Buy French"—to protect their home trade and labor.

In this country patriotic Americans are now "Buying American," to protect American industry from "cheap money" competition, and American labor from the competition of pauper alien labor.

Why should anybody object to that?

Marriage—Theory or Experience

So they've finally decided to give a course on matrimony in one of our leading colleges! But who will be the lecturer on Husband-Management?

Will it be a theorist or a successful wife? And, would any REALLY successful wife divulge her hard-won secrets on how to be the "power behind the gas range?"

* * *

What marriage needs is not so many dabblers, but a good press agent. The ancient and honorable institution is up to its neck in publicity, but it's all the wrong kind. Poets sing of the glamour of love and never stop to find out if, or how, the lovers "live happily ever after."

And there's the rub! Perhaps, as with writing or acting, you can learn only by experience.

The first thing experience teaches a wife is that truth is just about as necessary as salt, but the best effect from either is obtained by using them sparingly.

* * *

She becomes a diplomat just as soon as she learns to keep a straight face—while she deceives her husband into thinking that HE is deceiving HER.

* * *

And when her husband holds her close and whispers that he loves the twinkle in her eyes, she makes sure that said eyes are mirrors wherein he may behold a perfect image of himself, highly flattered and greatly retouched.

* * *

A pair of limpid, baby-blue eyes or even sympathetic brown ones, should be listed among the world's leading labor-saving devices.

A wife can turn them on her Big Darling while he recites his tale of woe, and she doesn't have to listen to him or even think about him until he pauses for breath, when she murmurs, "Isn't that too bad! I'm SO sorry, dear!"

Let a woman serve up a man's ideas in her own language, and he'll tell anyone who's willing to listen that he's married to a "darn clever girl;" and will wonder forever why she wasn't picked as one of the world's most brilliant women.

To be really successful, however, she should be able at all times to think in a clever and logical manner, while she prattles to her "great, big, DUCKY-WUCKY" in the baby-talk a 2-year-old would disdain to use.

Many a time, in her spinster days, she may have longed to go to an institution of higher learning to get a degree of "Bachelor of Arts."

* * *

But after she has listened to, smiled at, grieved for and waited on a husband for a couple of years, she just naturally becomes a "Doctor of Philosophy."

* * *

A wise woman knows that sweetness and light in matrimony is best preserved by allowing her husband to say what he pleases while she does what SHE pleases.

* * *

And after all, "Yes dear," is a very small amusement tax to pay for having your own way!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Waking to learn I had sleep-walked to a window, shouting: "Robbers!" But no memory of it soever. So, came a letter from Rupert Hughes, quoting George Washington's diary of his hunting and fishing around Gallipolis, O.

Also, an autographed volume of Annette Kellerman's tales of the South Seas. Laboring in the afternoon until Ada and Gilbert Gabriel dropped by. Later to see Kathleen Norris, here to join Charlie from Europe, and walking part of the way home with Irvin Cobb.

To dinner with Maj. Bowes, finding Mayor O'Brien and his lady there. Also, the M. H. Aylesworths, Father Martin, Grace George and W. A. Brady, Mrs. Holbrook Blinn, the Sam Goldsmiths and George Armsby. Afterward, driving Mrs. Blinn to Sixty-seventh street, and home, reading Marcus Griffin's biography of Jimmy Johnston.

Memory of that black and white Broadway Shekinah, the Domino Room, is revived by the combination roulette and cocktail tray, which Jacques Bustanoby, the restaurateur, has devised in his Jersey cloister, for "mud-in-your-eye" assemblages. Jacques, radiating a cool elan, was the shock-absorber for the human strain pressing his entrance ropes for the privilege of hailing dawn with a hiccup.

One bumps into Dan Evans, hero of Lowell Thomas' "This Side of Hell," now and then, in the more leisurely cafes, removed from the roar. From a plow-boy in Texas, he became the last of the rip-snorting army sergeants, a real life Quirt. He dealt faro in Mexico City, served as a general in Greek and Chinese armies, rode the rods and slept in royal beds like a true soldier of fortune. As proof of his jousts, he has a bullet scarred face, stump of arm and a twisted leg.

Personal nomination for the most accomplished American essayist—Christopher Morley.

Not even Caruso and Farrar have been more sincerely missed at the Metropolitan than will Antonio Scotti, who recently announced his retirement. I met Scotti some years ago, at Hugh and Sadie Murray's. Among other guests, was a cinema actress, one of those overly brilliant flames appearing so suddenly. She was babbling of Hollywood, her latest film and a trip abroad. During the lull, she murmured to Scotti, sitting quietly by: "There are so many famous people here, I forget exactly what you do." He replied: "I sing, sometimes." There was an "Oh," and change of subject. When she flitted off, so naively unconscious was he of his own importance, he exclaimed: "What a marvelously exciting lady!"

It just struck me that the director of the United States budget, J. Clawson Roop, has the whooping-coughingest name I ever heard.

Joseph V. McKee likes to read by the light of a kerosene lamp . . . Helen and Grace Menken call each other "Menk" . . . Gov. Herbert Lehman plays the cello . . . Mayor O'Brien's license plate is "O B-1" . . . Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler expect to settle down in a Lake Coma villa some day . . . Roxy did not sleep for three nights before the Music Hall opening . . . Erskine Gwynne is re-launching the Paris Boulevardier April 1 . . . But for the 1929 catastrophe, Phil Baker would have folded his accordion and retired to Italy in 1932—to study piano. To aid in keeping tryst with this ambition, he bought a half million dollars worth of stocks on margin. Thus, a calamity gave the state laughs which it might have been denied.

Someone sent the dogs a bright ball for Christmas. They don't care for it. So, this morning, I fulfilled a burning ambition. Sneaking to the roof with the guilt of a jam-stealing youngster, I flung the sphere to the pavement below to watch it bounce. It missed the roadway and landed with a "squash" in the middle mall. It doesn't matter. There's no more fun in the old world anyway.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Somebody writes: "One has to believe something in these insane days. One has to hold on to something. Yet I can't find anything that doesn't crumble in my hands. You seem steady. How do you manage? What's your creed?"

My creed? Even if I had one, it wouldn't be useful to anyone but myself, stranger. But as a matter of fact, I haven't one—nor do I want one. I don't believe in drawing up Articles of Faith which shall endure for a life time. I don't believe that any man can possibly devise a spiritual rule which is wise enough or sacred enough to last through our allotted "three score years."

I think our faith should grow as we grow, and change as life changes. And it seems to me as stupid and unhealthy to never change one's faith as to never change one's linen.

But there is one thing in which I do believe constantly—and all blunderings have but intensified this belief. I BELIEVE IN GOODNESS.

I can't define Goodness. No one can define it. An act that was "good" in 1833 might not be "good" at all in 1933. But the FEELING BEHIND ANY GOOD ACT—the desire for decency, the love of honesty, the hunger for beauty—is always the same at any time. So, in that wide and adventuring sense, I BELIEVE IN GOODNESS.

I believe that Goodness is wiser than any kind of Smartness, stronger than any sort of Power.

I believe that a Good Act is the most intelligent and beautiful and, in the long run, the most profitable form of human expression.

However, I try not to fool myself about Goodness.

I know perfectly well that much which masquerades as Goodness isn't Goodness at all. I know that many of my own "Good Deeds" have actually sprung from cowardice, selfishness, ignorance and conceit—although I did not always realize this when I committed them.

And this is true of all of us. Much which we call "Virtue" is simply a slick technique for dodging trouble. Millions have been "good" because they didn't have the nerve to be bad. Why do "the wicked flourish"? That's why. Because the average Sinner has 10 times as much backbone as the so-called Saint.

So I don't kid myself that Being Good is any snap. I know it's the fightingest job any human can tackle.

Nor do I allow myself to believe that Goodness always pays—in the sense that the world reckons profit; nor that Goodness is always safe—in the sense that the world reckons safety. Nor do I think that "if you're good, you'll be happy."

I believed all these things once. As a child I accepted them, without dispute, from my platitudinous elders, who abhorred the Naked Truth and felt that they had to dress up everything pretty, including God. But I soon found that Goodness was a far grimmer thing than I had been led to expect.

I found that it required enormous courage to be Good, and what is even harder, unflinching honesty with oneself.

I found that Goodness is always tremendously costly. Nine times out of ten, really Good People are extremely unpopular—and for a very obvious reason. THEY SHOW UP THE REST OF THE CROWD.

That's why martyrs were crucified, tortured, burned at the stake. No one minded them being good—but they made things so uncomfortable for everyone else. It's human to resent anyone who's obviously braver, kinder, cleaner and more honest than you are. It's also human to give him the works—if the law will permit.

And as for happiness, if you're truly trying to be good you can never be happy, for you're constantly seeing the other fellow's need, and realizing what a four-flusher you are.

Yet, in spite of all its difficulties and dangers, I BELIEVE IN GOODNESS.

I Believe in Goodness because it's the one quality which shoves human life ahead—and shoves a man with it. It's the one thing that develops and feeds fine human pride, comforts human weakness—and brings Man a little nearer to his lovely dream of God.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Sunshine Still

When life is hard to understand,
Then turn to things quite close at hand;
The homely things, the humble task,
These will not fail the peace you ask.
Forgetting mooted good and ill,
Your life will gain some sunshine still.

And as you seek, so you will find
The roadway smooth, the guidance kind.
Not only from the world without
Comes joy, but through a courage stout
Brave hearts have bliss no blight can kill
And through the years some sunshine still.

Then leave behind the dread, the doubt,
And shut the questioning fear without;
Meet each today in valiant mood
And welcome only what is good.
Triumph at last your cup will fill
And you will gain all sunshine still.

The War Debts and Their Relation to Business

By BAINBRIDGE COLBY

Former Secretary of State, in an address delivered before the National Retail Dry Goods Association in New York City.

Since I received your invitation to discuss the international debts and their relation to business, there has occurred the French default, presenting a situation which it is yet difficult to appraise in all its implications.

The private debts owed to American institutions and individuals by private borrowers abroad seem to be outside the scope of my subject. Furthermore, repudiation has not yet shown its head in the field of private debts.

Such international debts with their specific problems we may leave to the bankers who so improvidently made the advances.

American attention is centered upon the war debts owed us by our former allies. These include the post-war advances of large amount for internal rehabilitation, the support of their currencies, and other peace-time aids and subventions dictated by American generosity and the desire to assist the economic recovery of friendly—and we assumed—grateful nations.

The Situation Grows More Tense

The situation, precipitated by the unlooked for and still incredible action of France, is tense and growing more so. In discussing it words should be measured and utterance guarded. The maxim of Benjamin Franklin is a good one to observe—"say nothing," said he, "unless it is useful."

Much water has gone over the mill in the 14 years during which the war debts have been under discussion. For it must be remembered that hardly had the armistice been signed in November, 1918, than the movement began among our European debtors to bring about the remission of the debts.

The first hint, according to Mr. Lloyd George in a book recently published, proceeded from England. It was only a little later—to be exact, January, 1919—that Col. House, then in Paris to attend the peace negotiations, says in his diary:

"There is every evidence that the Allies have a growing intention not to repay us the money we have loaned them."

The Famous Balfour Proposal

In 1922 came the famous Balfour proposal of an all-round cancellation—a suggestion which fell flat when it was seen that England and France were relinquishing only what they would be obliged to pay us in turn, and that the proposal meant a shift of the residual cost of the war upon the American taxpayer.

The funding of the debts by voluntary agreement with the debtors involved negotiations extending over a period of seven years. The first agreement was made with Finland in 1923 and the last with Austria in 1930. The agreements involved large concessions by us on the obligations as originally incurred and were formally ratified by the several debtor nations, although by France with significant delay.

All payments abruptly ceased with the declaration of the so-called Hoover moratorium in June, 1931, since which time this country had received nothing on account of its advances until the partial payment of the sums due on December 15, made up chiefly of the payment received from England.

Animosity to The Obligation

Now we are assured, even by those of our debtors who have paid, that nothing more will be paid until their debts are put upon a new and drastically revised basis.

No request is made for the help or forbearance which a creditor might naturally be asked to extend to a debtor endeavoring against difficulties to meet his debt. Not in that spirit have our debtors at any time approached us.

On the contrary, it has always been with an unconcealed animosity to the obligation itself. They have assailed the fact that their obligations exist, seeming to rebel at the fact that they are debtors, and apparently harboring a resentment toward the United States not only for heeding their cries for succor during the war, but for putting them even under the obligations of gratitude.

I think I may say truthfully that THIS ATTITUDE has been the CHIEF SOURCE of the difficulties which, in such thick cluster, have grown up around the subject of the debts in general.

Raised By Popular Subscription

Much has been said of the ATTITUDE OF EUROPE to the debts. Too little has been said of the ATTITUDE OF THE UNITED STATES to the debts.

Strange as it may seem to our Allies, there is still an impression in this country that America saved them from defeat—possibly from destruction.

On our part it was the act, not of a government, but of a people persuaded that the Allies were defending the principle of good faith in international relations, the validity of the signatures of governments, the honor of pledges given by nations.

The billions we loaned to Europe were raised by popular subscription.

The great sum required merely to pay the annual interest upon our Liberty bonds is raised by taxation of the people. We were adjured to "pay until it hurt," and we are still paying and must continue to pay indefinitely, by way of interest, a sum in addition to what we originally contributed.

To the surprise and painful disillusionment of the American people they find their debtors not only thankless, but apparently determined not to pay.

Debt Evasion Apparatus Assembled

We cannot understand why they should even be DESIROUS of NOT PAYING. We cannot understand why they should not be SOLICITOUS and insistent that we receive back—as fast as they can pay it and in whatever form they find it possible to pay us—the money advanced with such unexampled generosity in an hour of such sore and utter need, without security, and in sole reliance upon the good will and the good faith of the borrowers.

In fact there is in this country a feeling that Europe should mass its RESISTANCE, NOT AGAINST PAYMENT, but AGAINST THE POSSIBILITY OF NON-PAYMENT, which to the obligors of such a debt as theirs should be in the last degree unthinkable and abhorrent.

But we overlooked the international financier and the economists and at this point they came marching on the scene.

They have assembled the entire apparatus of debt evasion—not to use the harsher term, REPUDIATION, which is distasteful to our debtors as a TERM, but not so distasteful, apparently, as a POLICY.

Once Overs

By J. J. Mundy

There cannot be much joy in giving or in receiving if complaint is heard constantly about the amount of money expended to procure seasonable presents.

Too often the heads of families do a lot of grumbling when bills come in at the end of the month for gifts that were purchased even by the one who makes the complaint.

Don't make gifts if it hurts you to pay for them.

The greatest value is lost to the recipient and the donor is robbed of the pleasure he might gain from gift-giving.

Giving expensive presents to the family and afterward reminding them of the cost and how foolish it was to make such expenditures creates displeasure.

Perhaps in the spirit of a holiday time you are tempted to go beyond your means in making purchases.

If so, that is your affair and it is nothing for which you can blame others, is it?

Be a good sport when you overstep your financial ability in remembering your family at holidays and birthdays.
